

TABLE 2

Operand and Operant Resources Help Distinguish the Logic of the Goods- and Service-Centered Views

	Traditional Goods-Centered Dominant Logic	Emerging Service-Centered Dominant Logic
Primary unit of exchange	People exchange for goods. These goods serve primarily as operand resources .	People exchange to acquire the benefits of specialized competences (knowledge and skills), or services. Knowledge and skills are operant resources .
Role of goods	Goods are operand resources and end products. Marketers take matter and change its form, place, time, and possession.	Goods are transmitters of operant resources (embedded knowledge); they are intermediate "products" that are used by other operant resources (customers) as appliances in value-creation processes.
Role of customer	The customer is the recipient of goods. Marketers do things to customers; they segment them, penetrate them, distribute to them, and promote to them. The customer is an operand resource .	The customer is a coproducer of service. Marketing is a process of doing things in interaction with the customer. The customer is primarily an operant resource , only functioning occasionally as an operand resource .
Determination and meaning of value	Value is determined by the producer. It is embedded in the operand resource (goods) and is defined in terms of "exchange-value."	Value is perceived and determined by the consumer on the basis of "value in use." Value results from the beneficial application of operant resources sometimes transmitted through operand resources . Firms can only make value propositions.
Firm-customer interaction	The customer is an operand resource . Customers are acted on to create transactions with resources.	The customer is primarily an operant resource . Customers are active participants in relational exchanges and coproduction.
Source of economic growth	Wealth is obtained from surplus tangible resources and goods. Wealth consists of owning, controlling, and producing operand resources .	Wealth is obtained through the application and exchange of specialized knowledge and skills. It represents the right to the future use of operant resources .
