The electricity sector has seen significant growth in the past decade, driven by a combination of factors. Government investment has been a key driver, particularly in the area of infrastructure development. Private sector investment has also played a major role, especially in the area of renewable energy sources. International aid has provided additional support, particularly in the area of policy reforms and technological innovation. Local community efforts and public-private partnerships have also been instrumental in the sector's growth. The global climate change initiatives have provided a strong impetus for the sector's development, particularly in the area of renewable energy sources. The electricity sector is expected to continue to grow in the coming years, driven by these factors.
