

The first stage of the process is to identify the key components of the system. This involves a thorough review of the system's architecture and the data it processes. The next stage is to design a data model that represents the system's data. This model is then used to create a database schema. The final stage is to implement the database and integrate it with the system's other components.

It is important to note that the database design process is an iterative one. As more information is gathered about the system, the design may need to be revised. It is also important to consider the system's performance requirements and to design the database to meet those requirements.
