Decentralising Public Service Management:

Decentralising Public Service Management Johnston Birchall, Keith Putman, Christopher Pollitt, 2016-01-01

Decentralise authority and let managers manage has been an almost universal message in UK public services over the last 15 years But does it really work Drawing on their own and a wide range of other research the authors show that behind the ministerial rhetoric the experiences of NHS trusts grant maintained schools and housing associations were in practice distinctly mixed The book offers a sophisticated theoretical analysis of the origins and results of decentralised public management in the UK

Romanian Public Management Reform: Administration and public services Lucica Matei, 2009

Public Service Decentralisation Peter C. Humphreys, Orla O'Donnell, 2006 This title includes chapters on decentralisation and reform an international perspective on decentralisation opportunities and challenges for leadership and collegiality and moving forward amongst others in a geographically decentralised Irish public service

Integrating People Management Into Public Service Reform Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development. Public Management Committee, 1996 In the context of major public sector reform efforts in many OECD countries increasing attention is being focused on the people side of the reform equation the human resource management policies and practices available to public sector managers to shape and direct the workforce to achieve new organisational goals The experiences of OECD countries show however that improving individual policies and practices is only part of the reform equation The key factor lies in integrating human resource management with the core business of the public service the outcome and output goals of individual departments and agencies and in doing so ensuring that effective management of people is recognised as an indispensable ingredient for accomplishing the business of government Using surveys and selected country case studies this monograph identifies the factors driving human resource management reforms in the national public administrations of OECD countries In offering the lessons drawn from these wide ranging experiences to the attention of policy makers and practitioners it identifies promising reform strategies for ensuring that human resource management policies evolve in ways consistent with broader public management reforms aimed at building more productive performance oriented and responsive public services
