Chance Of Rain:

The Metaphysics of Historical Jesus Research Jonathan Rowlands, 2015-10-15 In this book Rowlands interrogates the theological and philosophical foundations of the Quest for the historical Jesus from Reimarus to the present day culminating in a call for greater metaphysical transparency and diversity in the discipline This multidisciplinary approach to historical Jesus research drawing on historiography sociology philosophy and theology makes a significant and original contribution to the field Part I outlines the implicit role of metaphysical presuppositions in historical methodology by examining the concept of an historiographical worldview Part II provides an overview of the Quest for the historical Jesus demonstrating that the disparate historiographical worldviews operative in the Quest evidence a particular shared characteristic in that they might accurately be described as secular Rowlands study concludes with a call for a greater plurality and openness regarding the philosophical and theological presuppositions at work in historical Jesus research The Metaphysics of Historical Jesus Research is of interest to students and scholars working on New Testament studies and historical Jesus research

A 30% Chance of Rain Tomorrow Gerd Gigerenzer, Ralph Hertwig, Eva van den Broek, Barbara Fasolo, Konstantinos V. Katsikopoulos, 2006 The weather forecast says that there is a 30% chance of rain and we think we understand what it means This quantitative statement is assumed to be unambiguous and to convey more information than does a qualitative statement like It might rain tomorrow Because the forecast is expressed as a single event probability however it does not specify the class of events it refers to Therefore even numerical probabilities can be interpreted by members of the public in multiple mutually contradictory ways To find out whether the same statement about rain probability evokes various interpretations we randomly surveyed pedestrians in five metropolises located in countries that have had different degrees of exposure to probabilistic forecasts Amsterdam Athens Berlin Milan and New York They were asked what a 30% chance of rain tomorrow means both in a multiple choice and a free response format Only in New York did a majority of them supply the standard meteorological interpretation namely that when the weather conditions are like today in 3 out of 10 cases there will be at least a trace of rain the next day In each of the European cities this alternative was judged as the least appropriate The preferred interpretation in Europe was that it will rain tomorrow 30% of the time followed by in 30% of the area To improve risk communication with the public experts need to specify the reference class that is the class of events to which a single event probability refers The Statistical Assessment of Rainfall Probability and Its Application in Uganda Agriculture H.
