Women and Citizenship in Britain and Ireland in the 20th Century Esther Breitenbach, Pat Thane, 2010-05-06 The continuing under representation of women in political and public life remains a matter of concern across a wide range of countries including the UK and Ireland. Within the UK it is a topical issue as political parties currently debate strategies, often controversial, which will increase women's representation. At the same time devolution has ushered in significant change in the level of women's representation in Scotland and Wales and improved representation for women in Northern Ireland. That such increases in women's representation in political institutions have been slow in coming is indisputable given that full enfranchisement of women on equal terms with men was achieved in Ireland in 1921 and in the UK in 1928.

Women in Britain Janet H. Howarth, 2018-11-29 The millennium has sharpened perspectives on the history of women in twentieth century Britain. Many features of the contemporary gender order date only from the last decades of the century: the expectation of equal opportunities in education and the work place, sexual autonomy for the individual and tolerance of a variety of family forms. The years dominated by the two World Wars saw real advances towards equal citizenship and legal rights and a growing sense of the impact on women of modernity in its various forms including consumerism and the mass media. But values inherited from the Victorians were still reflected in the class hierarchy, the policing of sexuality and the male breadwinner family. This anthology of original sources, accompanied by a state of the art bibliography, illustrates patterns of continuity and change in women's experience and their place in national life. An introductory survey provides an accessible overview and analysis of controversial issues such as the relationship between first, second and third wave feminism.
