second turn skirted the low northern ledge where in June the locust hangs its tassels of perfumed snow and in autumn time the wild barberry perfects its coral clusters There all summer long the wind blows cool and sweet and resting on low mossy boulders you may sight on the left Middlesex Fells and across the blue distance glimpse Tufts College on its broad grassy hill with the Mystic River if the tide be in creeping leisurely between you and that ancient seat of learning Following the walk down the lazy declivity you take a turn with it beneath two aged pines with the big lily of the valley patch nestling in their shade and hard by the well appointed triangular flower plot from time immemorial bedded out with The Lady s house plants Turning on your track you take a stroll through The Lover s Walk a little lilac embowered pathway and turning follow past the back of the house the long rocky ledge with its glorious crown of white lilac trees their tall tops touching the very ridge pole of the roof There orange toadstools like fairy parasols push up through the damp mosses There a giant Norway spruce drops its cones and spreads its brown carpet of needles and in summer time you may dream away the hours upon the cool stone steps and harkening to an ancient pine singing its slow song may Eat of the lotus and dream and forget The rough wagon road on the East takes you from the high road to the big old fashioned barn beneath whose eaves year after year the punctual swallow nests while high among the rafters within immemorial pigeons rear their toothsome squabs
