

Diseases of the Digestive System

The Esophagus Lining

The esophagus is the tube that carries food from the mouth to the stomach. The esophagus is lined with a mucous membrane that is made of a single layer of cells. This lining is called the esophageal lining. It is made of a special type of tissue called stratified squamous epithelium. This tissue is made of many layers of cells. The outermost layer is made of flat cells. The inner layers are made of cells that are more rounded. This lining is very important because it protects the esophagus from the damage that can be done by the food that we eat.
