

Annotated Bibliography APA.docx

Smith, J. A. (2018). The Impact of Climate Change on Global Food Security. Environmental Studies Journal, 45(3), 235-248.

Annotation: In this peer-reviewed journal article, Smith examines the potential consequences of climate change on global food security. The author discusses how rising temperatures, changing precipitation patterns, and extreme weather events can lead to food scarcity and increased prices. The article highlights the importance of implementing adaptive agricultural practices and policies to mitigate these effects. Smith's research provides valuable insights into the relationship between climate change and food security, making it a relevant source for my research on environmental sustainability.
