Bali Spheres:

Bali Spheres Sasa Felsbach, 2001 This is not another book on paradise but a personal photographic diary of everyday life in Bali There are no honeymooners or tourists here Shot over a three year period Sasa Felsbach's pictures seek to turn our notion of Bali around They reveal the haunting mountain ranges and subtle climate soaked in light along with the rituals and modern practice of the Balinese The photographs are accompanied by a fictional essay by Clark Accord Voices in Bali Edward Herbst, 2012-12-20 A scholar and trained performer of Balinese vocal music and dance ethnomusicologist Edward Herbst brings unique talents to bear in this provocative book The lessons of his Balinese masters enable him to offer fresh insight to this culture's aesthetics and cultural elements Appropriating John Cage's effective style of mixing theory anecdote context philosophy and humor Herbst crafts an accessible body of work compelling in substance and form By merging the Balinese concept of place time context with Cage's concepts of structure method and form Herbst returns to the critical issue of what scholars and intercultural artists are doing and what is their object under study Undergraduates and scholars in fields as varied as theater studies and anthropology will find this book and companion CD in print editions an important resource not only for its knowledgeable treatment of Balinese culture but as an example of a more personal and engaging style of scholarly discourse The ebook edition includes embedded audio The Internet and the Construction of the Immigrant Public Sphere : the Case of the Cameroonian Diaspora Kehbuma Langmia, 2008 The Internet has become a powerful medium for Africans in the Diaspora to meet for cross border dialogue Cameroonians all over the world are using this tool for what the present study considers to be a public sphere discourse Cameroonians living in the United States and other nations use the Internet to discuss and debate the political social economic and cultural aspects of the nationhood of Cameroon with the aim of seeking solutions to some of those pressing needs that confront the country This study builds on Habermas and other leading feminist authors conceptualization of the democratic public sphere central to Habermas theory of communicative action This study's theoretical framework incorporates elements of the African experience in order to examine the dominant oppositional and parallel themes that arise from four Cameroonian websites just before the national presidential election in 2004 The methodology adapts Jager's critical discourse analytical CDA framework which was deemed an appropriate methodology because it sought not only to analyze the linguistic component of the discourse in the four websites but more importantly to examine the holistic structure of the discourse that is its history and context This study concludes that gender disparity existed in the dialogue between Cameroonian men and women Cameroonian men were more dominant than the women in the discourse on the central themes involving the Cameroonian presidential election of 2004 The all female website was more focused on the infrastructural development of Cameroon Lastly these findings suggest that future studies should focus on the ways that the Cameroonians and other Diasporic populations utilize the Internet to create alternative discursive spaces for political and social purposes Environmental Communication and the Public Sphere

Robert Cox, 2010 Environmental Communication and the Public Sphere is the first comprehensive undergraduate textbook in the growing field of environmental communication. It takes as its theme the role of communication in influencing the ways in which we perceive the environment as well as what actions we and others take in our relations to the natural world. The text blends scholarship and hands-on experiences to provide a theory-based and coherent description of the concrete communication practices and sites in the debates over environment protection. Additional theory and vocabulary are introduced as are case studies and examples for closer examination of the principal sites and practices of environmental communication including forums for public participation, advocacy campaigns, media coverage of environmental stories, risk communication, and models of dispute settlement. This accessible book summarizes current scholarship in the area and makes accessible many of the practices of media corporations and advocacy groups that are not readily available in public sources. Gives students insight into the practical ways to participate publicly in influencing the decisions of governmental agencies that affect the environment. Offers a comprehensible treatment of the complexity and range of issues, sites, and practices in environmental communication. Includes Act Locally exercises which provide opportunities for students to apply their knowledge of the principles of environmental communication.

Reuter, 2002-01-31 Annotation The Bali Aga are a large ethnic minority of indigenous people that live in the central highlands of Bali. In this ethnographic study Reuter, a research fellow at the U of Melbourne, examines their elaborate alliance systems and their marginalization in the larger Balinese society. He concludes by proposing an intersubjective and communicative model of human interaction as the foundation for understanding the relative significance of cooperation and competition in the cultural production of knowledge.

The House of Our Ancestors Thomas Anton Reuter, 2002 The House of Our Ancestors is a study of the Mountain Balinese or Bali Aga, an ethnic group with a distinct history and culture who are thought to be the indigenous people of Bali, Indonesia. In popular ideas of Balinese identity, the highland people feature as the conceptual counterpart to the royal houses established in the southern lowlands of the island. Hidden in shadow of this courtly culture, the world of the highland Balinese has been largely ignored, even though Bali counts among the most researched localities in the world. This book explores their social organization and status economy from the perspective of an innovative theory of precedence. Regional domains, villages and origin houses among the Bali Aga are all conceived and ranked in reference to the basic ideas of a sacred origin in the past and of an order of precedence connecting the past with the present. The analysis of precedence ranking evident at all levels of Bali Aga social organization leads to the development of a new theory of status for Austronesian societies that departs radically from the notion of hierarchy as proposed by Louis Dumont in his classic study of the Indian caste system.

Bali Michel Picard, 1996. Celebrated for the richness of its artistic and religious traditions, the island of Bali has made its distinctive culture the brand image of its tourist product. This has aroused fears among foreign observers and indigenous authorities alike who wonder whether Balinese culture will survive the impact of tourism. The author also explores how tourism has contributed to the shaping of modern Balinese culture. An in-depth collection of tourism brochures, advertisements, postcards, newspaper cartoons, tourist snapshots, and fine art illustrate this analysis of not only how Bali is viewed but also how their visitors and the tourist industry view it.
