Identity and Experience at the India-Bangladesh Border Debdata Chowdhury,2018-06-28 The effects of the partition of India in 1947 have been more far reaching and complex than the existing partition narratives of violence and separation reveal The immediacy of the movement of refugees between India and the newly formed state of Pakistan overshadowed the actual effect of the drawing of the border between the two states The book is an empirical study of border narratives across the India Bangladesh border specifically the West Bengal part of India's border with Bangladesh. It tries to move away from the perpetrator state victim civilian framework usually used in the studies of marginal people and looks at the kind of agencies that the border people avail themselves of. Instead of looking at the border as the periphery, the book looks at it as the line of convergence and negotiations, the centre of the people who survive it every day. It shows that various social, political, and economic identities converge at the borderland and is modified in unique ways by the spatial specificity of the border, thus forming a border identity and a border consciousness. Common sense of the civilians and the state machinery embodied in the border guards collide, cooperate, and effect each other at the borderlands to form this unique spatial consciousness. It is the everyday survival strategies of the border people which aptly reflects this consciousness rather than any universal border theory or state-centric discourses about the borders. A bottom-up approach is of utmost importance in order to understand how a spatially unique area binds diverse other identities into a larger spatial identity of a border people. The book's relevance lies in its attempt to explore such everyday narratives across the Bengal border while avoiding any major theorising project so as not to choke the potential of such experience-centred insights into the lives of a unique community of people. In that it contributes towards a study of borders globally, providing potential approaches to understand border people worldwide. Based on detailed field research, this book brings a fresh approach to the study of this border. It will be of interest to researchers in the field of South Asian studies, citizenship, development, governance, and border studies. Updating Poverty Maps of Bangladesh, 2009

Bangladesh Population Census 1991 Bangladesh, 1994 Determinants of Land Use Change in South-west Region of Bangladesh Jahangir Alam, 2014-12-24 Research Paper postgraduate from the year 2014 in the subject Geography Earth Science Physical Geography Geomorphology Environmental Studies grade A Khulna University Economics Discipline course BSS Honours in Economics language English abstract Like all other parts of the world, land use patterns in Bangladesh, especially of the south-west part, have been observed to change rapidly since the late 20th century. Lands of the south-west region were generally used for rice farming since the middle of the 20th century, but the polderization project of Bangladesh during the 1970s caused major changes in land use patterns, either through transformation or modification of land cover and cropping. Literature shows that single-cropped rice areas of past decades have already been cultivated twice or thrice per year, while some such lands have already been converted for shrimp farming. This paper examines the determinants of land use patterns and their corresponding changes, i.e. rice and shrimp farming, over time at Pirozpur village of Kaligonj upazila under Satkhira district of Khulna division in Bangladesh. The study is being done on the basis of cross-sectional data collected from the decision maker or head of each sample household. Here, data have been collected through questionnaire as well as focus group discussion from a sample size of 80 households, each forty from shrimp and rice farming. Here, logistic regression, considering rice farming land as the reference dummy, as well as cost-benefit analysis, is being done to know the extents of land use determinants. However, the study area being close to the river Hariavanga, shrimp farming has become predominant in the study area and young people are more interested in shrimp farming than in any other land use alternatives Analysis shows that cost free irrigation for shrimp farming as well as higher profit lower cost and available inputs are the major factors of increased shrimp farming in the study area The study also finds that if rice can be cultivated thrice per year then shrimp is less attractive while there lacks training facilities for the rice farmers which may cause dissatisfaction to land owners causing conversion of rice land into shrimp Available land holders primarily decide their land use pattern based on short run cost benefit calculation rather than long run impact of land use in their livelihood as well as ecology The study finds age natural calamities family type and availability of credit to be negatively related with shrimp farming while land engagement process accessibility economically active family number proximity to service sector neighborhood land use patterns land ownership and land rent to be positively related Bangladesh Population Census, 1991 ,1993 Marketing Bangladesh's Potatoes Gregory J. Scott,1988 Bibliographic Guide to Maps and Atlases 2001 G. K. Hall and Co. Staff,GK Hall,2002-07 Rights, Rivers and the Quest for Water Commons: The Case of Bangladesh Imtiaz Ahmed,2021-04-09 Right to water may sound novel and somewhat dramatic yet it has been central to the quest of human civilization for thousands of years One of the earliest references to water as common property can be found in the Jewish laws as early as 3000 BCE Similar views are also found in Islam In fact the Arabic word for Islamic law shari ah originally meant the place from which one descends to water Since water is a gift from the divine to all living beings sharing water is regarded as holy duty This is found across religions regions societies and communities from New Zealand to Nigeria from Bangladesh to Brazil But then what transformed the divine sanction What led to the negation of the commons with sharing of the riverine water across territorial boundaries suffering the most The answer probably lies as much as in the politics of safeguarding one s personal or national interests as it is in the limitations imposed by our disciplinary understanding of things In this context a thorough reexamination even reconceptualization of some of the core issues is required Firstly the concept of water needs to be understood not as H₂O as it is done in physical sciences but as H₂OP₄ That is the meaning of water in social sciences must include not only twice hydrogen plus oxygen but also four P s pollution power politics and profit This is not to discount the science in the conceptualization of water but rather to add elements central to social sciences Secondly the concept of river needs to be redefined and understood not as a carrier of water as assumed in most of the Western languages but as nadi a flow consisting of prana life shakti power and atman soul as etymologically defined in most of the South Asian languages This comes closer to what critical hydrologists would say WEBS that is a river consists of water energy biodiversity and sediment In this light any fragmentation of transboundary river water in the name of sharing becomes an unworkable option unless of course a mechanism is found to share the water of the river along with its energy biodiversity and sediment and that again without distorting and harming the life of the river Thirdly the subject of water commons needs to be approached from the standpoint of rights of both human and river This is to flag the notion that nature including rivers has rights just like humans

although their manifestations may be different In fact empowered humans particularly those in control of the state have more responsibility than rights in dissuading themselves and others from creating conditions of human wrongs not only against fellow human beings but also against nature Finally if the rights of humans are to be ensured then there is an urgent need to reconceptualize and mainstream the human as a multiverse being This is because humans are not only political beings but also economic cultural ecological technological and psychological beings In this light if conflicts are to be contained then humans need to be empowered in all possible areas of life politics economics ecology culture technology and psychology This would certainly require empowering each and every person all at the same time receptive to nature in general and rivers in particular The book is designed to initiate a discourse on the civilizational quest for water commons indeed with the expectation that a discussion on rights and rivers would lead to a creative flow of ideas and practices

Rivers and Sustainable Development S. Nazrul Islam, 2020-08-15 Rivers are a vital component of ecology the earth's hydrological cycle depends on them However across the world rivers are under stress and even in crisis With rising populations the demand for river water is increasing Many rivers fail to reach the sea because of excessive withdrawal of water and many other rivers are heading toward the same fate Conflicts over river water are increasing and climate change is making matters worse River policies pursued so far are often aggravating these challenges rather than solving them Yet sustainable development requires healthy rivers Urgent change in the approach and policies toward rivers is therefore required In this book Nazrul Islam points to the ways in which river policies need to change to ensure sustainable development He offers a new conceptual framework using such concepts as the Commercial and Cordon approaches to rivers and their opposite the Ecological and Open approaches He shows that while the former generally work against sustainability the latter are conducive to sustainable development The book illustrates this reality by drawing upon worldwide experience regarding rivers Going forward river policies therefore should be based on Ecological and Open approaches Islam argues further that the use of the new conceptual framework offered in this book can help to connect the river related discussion of experts with that of activists It can thus help to move the discussion of river policies from the narrow confines of experts to the wider arena of the public who should have a greater role in formulation of river policies in order to safeguard public interests and ensure sustainability The book serves as a valuable guide for those interested in learning about river policy changes necessary to promote sustainable development

Bangladesh Delta Plan 2100: Strategy, 2018 People's Report on Bangladesh Environment, 2001: Main report Atiur Rahman, 2001 Bangladesh: Main report, 2012 Rural Land Use in Bangladesh Alauddin Ahmed, 1995 India-Bangladesh Relations, Documents, 1971-2002: Bangladesh refugees, 2003 Floods in Bangladesh Thomas Hofer, Bruno Messerli, 2006 Is it really true that deforestation and land use practices of the Himalayan farmers are to blame for the recurring and devastating monsoon floods in the plains of the Ganga and Brahmaputra The validity of this paradigm has been increasingly questioned This book presents new evidence resulting from a research project on floods in Bangladesh in the context of highland lowland linkages Massive floods have occurred regularly before man s impact on the large river basins began There is no statistical evidence that the frequency of flooding in Bangladesh has increased during the 20th century There is indication however that the inter annual variation of floods and the areal extent of big events have increased since 1950 This trend can be related to similar trends in rainfall and discharge patterns The hydro meteorological processes in the Himalayas are not the main causes for floods in Bangladesh The combination of simultaneous discharge peaks of the big rivers high runoff from the Meghalaya Hills heavy rainfall in Bangladesh high groundwater tables and spring tides creates particularly favourable conditions for large scale flooding Lateral river embankments and the disappearance of natural water storage areas in the lowlands seem to have a significant impact on the flooding processes Accordingly the myth about deforestation creating big floods and the habit of blaming mountain dwellers for the flood catastrophes must be abandoned However this does not relieve the mountain inhabitants of their responsibility to use and manage the environment sustainably Whereas politicians and engineers perceive monsoon floods as the main problem for Bangladesh the flood affected people are more concerned besides the devastating tropical cyclones with lateral river erosion landlessness and economic survival problems Journal of Contemporary Urban Affairs Vol.3 No. 2., 2019 Cristian Sammarco, Evren Korkmazer, Yasin Bektas, Mervebanu Aykanat, Shargiyaya Jevedzade, Gokçen Firdevs Yücel Caymaz, Maria A.
