- It originates from childhood through harsh parenting, for example, severe discipline and harsh criticism.

Outline and explain two methodological issues in Asch's studies of social influence (4 marks)

- Participants were all white, male students (the review was androcentric and ethnocentric)
- You can't apply the findings to women, different cultures or people of different ages.
- The task was artificial (not an accurate representation of everyday life)
- This means that the participants may have responded to demand characteristics, so findings don't generalise to everyday situations where group interactions are more frequent or essential.
