WINE FOLLY

Harvest grapes

The weather conditions affect the harvest and it's important to harvest on time. Grapes are harvested and then processed in the winery to make wine.

Prepare grapes

Grapes are washed and then crushed. The juice is separated from the skins and seeds. The skins are left to ferment for a few days.

Clarification

Clarification is the process of removing any remaining solids from the wine. This is done by filtering the wine through a fine mesh.

Press

The grapes are crushed and the juice is separated from the skins and seeds. The juice is then filtered to remove any remaining solids.

Fermentation

The wine is fermented in a barrel for several days. The temperature is kept between 15°C and 20°C. The wine is then filtered to remove any remaining solids.

Add yeast

Yeast is added to the wine to start the fermentation process. The yeast converts the sugar in the wine into alcohol and carbon dioxide.

Bottling

The wine is bottled and sealed. The bottles are then stored in a cellar for several months to allow the wine to mature.

Malolactic

Malolactic fermentation is a process where malic acid is converted into lactic acid. This process gives the wine a smoother taste and helps to stabilize it.

Aging

The wine is aged in barrels for several months. This allows the wine to develop a more complex flavor and a smoother texture.

Blending

The wine is blended with other wines to create a specific flavor profile. The blending process is done by the winemaker.

Bottle aging

The wine is aged in bottles for several months. This allows the wine to develop a more complex flavor and a smoother texture.

The Culture of the Grape, and Wine-Making (Classic Reprint) Robert Buchanan,2015-07-03 Excerpt from The Culture of the Grape and Wine Making Three editions of this little treatise within a year being required to supply the demand for it would seem to indicate that the public interest in Grape Culture is on the increase The author therefore deems it his duty to give the result of his own experience and that of his fellow members of the Wine growers Association in vineyard culture during the past year It was found that the severe frosts of January and February 1852 8 to 12 below zero killed many of the grape buds in warm exposed situations and several vineyards in Kentucky a few miles south of this city scarcely produced any fruit The hard frosts of the 18th and 19th of March did not injure the grape buds although many apples such as the yellow Belleflower were killed in the opening bud all the peaches many of the pears and most of the cherries were destroyed The frosts of the middle of April and second week in May injured the young shoots of the vine especially in low situations or near moisture and in the rows near grass but with all these visitations from frosts the grape crop was a very promising one until attacked by the rot the second week in July and subsequently the first week in August the latter but slight This disease appeared to affect those vineyards most that were in low situations or not fully exposed to a free circulation of air either from close planting or otherwise High manuring deep hoeing or plowing and a want of summer pruning at the right time it was thought increased the liability to rot This disease or something like it prevailed in many parts of Europe last year where it had scarcely been known before and in the island of Madeira caused an almost entire failure of the grape crop In this vicinity it cut off about half of the average crop reducing the product of the whole county to about one hundred gallons per acre Some made more but many less than that average About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an
