Nominal Classification in Asia and Oceania
Marc Allasonnière-Tang, Marcin Kilarski, 2023-12-01 Linguists have long been interested in systems of nominal classification due to their diverse functions as well as cognitive and cultural correlates Among others ongoing research has focused on semantic functional and morphosyntactic properties of complex systems such as co occurring gender and numeral classifiers Such approaches have typically focused on the languages of north western South America and Papua New Guinea This volume proposes to fill in a gap in existing research by focusing on Asia based on case studies from languages belonging to a wide range of families i e Austroasiatic Austronesian Dravidian Hmong Mien Indo European Mongolic Sino Tibetan and Tai Kadai as well as the language isolate Nivkh Gender and classifiers in these languages are approached within several different perspectives i e functional typological and diachronic thus revealing complex patterns in their lexical and pragmatic functions as well as origin development and loss Describing and analysing such properties is a unique and innovative contribution of the volume

Systems of Nominal Classification Gunter Senft, 2000-08-03 This book first published in 2000 addresses the fundamental linguistic question of how the perceived world is expressed through systems of nominal classification that are grammatically encoded in various languages A team of leading international scholars reviews the whole spectrum of nominal classification from gender systems through to numeral classifiers providing cutting edge theoretical interpretations and empirical case studies based on a wide range of languages The volume presents ideas about the problems of classification advances theory by proposing typological categories and clarifies the interface between anthropological and grammatical work Focusing on systems that have a conceptual semantic basis the contributors reflect and represent approaches in nominal classification research This invaluable reference work will appeal to linguists anthropologists and psychologists alike as well as specialists in languages as diverse as Australian Amazonian Mayan and Japanese what do we really know about nominal classification systems? , Classifiers Alexandra Y. Aikhenvald, 2000-03-30 Almost all languages have some grammatical means for the linguistic categorization of nouns Well known systems such as the lexical numeral classifiers of South East Asia on the one hand and the highly grammaticalized gender agreement classes of Indo European languages on the other are the extremes of a continuum They can have a similar semantic basis and one can develop from the other Classifiers come in different morphological forms they can be free nouns clitics or affixes Some languages combine several varieties of classifiers Different types of classifiers show varying correlations with other grammatical categories In addition they differ in their semantics in the way they develop and in the way they become obsolescent and disappear These parameters are the basis for the typology of classifiers presented here This book is almost certainly the most substantial cross linguistic account of classifiers ever published Its range of exemplification includes major and minor languages from every continent several from the author s own fieldwork The work combines original research with innovative analysis and will interest typologists those working in the field of morphosyntactic variation and lexical semantics and exponents of formal theories who wish to explain the range of linguistic diversity found in natural language

Language and Linguistics in Melanesia ,1995 Anthropological Linguistics ,1998 Deixis and Demonstratives in Oceanic Languages Gunter Senft,2004 When we communicate we communicate in a certain context and this context shapes our utterances Natural languages are context bound and deixis concerns the ways in which languages encode or grammaticalise features of the context of utterance or speech event and thus also concerns ways in which the interpretation of utterances depends on the analysis of that context of utterance Stephen Levinson The systems of deixis and demonstratives in the Oceanic languages represented in the contributions to this volume illustrate the fascinating complexity of spatial reference in these languages Some of the studies presented here highlight social aspects of deictic reference illustrating de Leon s point that reference is a collaborative task It is hoped that this anthology will contribute to a better understanding of this area and provoke further studies in this extremely interesting though still rather underdeveloped research area
