Danger In Cascadia:

Perspectives on Tsunami Hazard Reduction: Observations, Theory and Planning Gerald T. Hebenstreit, 2013-03-09 The promontory of Gargano in the southern Adriatic Sea represents one of the most interesting Italian coastal zones subjected to tsunami hazard Figure 1a gives the geographical map of Italy with a box embracing the region of Gargano details of that region are in turn sketched in Figure 1b Because of the incompleteness of the earthquake and tsunami catalogues no reports on tsunamis in this area are available prior to 1600 AD The Gargano events have been recently revised in order to establish their reliability and to attain the phenomenological reconstruction of the tsunamis Guidoboni and Tinti 1987 and 1988 Tinti et al 1995 This work fits the general purpose of assessing tsunami hazard along the Italian coasts and represents a continuation of a previous study where the first quantitative description of the 1627 tsunami from a numerical modeling viewpoint was performed Tinti and Piatanesi 1996 The earthquake took place on 30 July 1627 about mid day and was followed by four large aftershocks It claimed more than 5 000 victims and destroyed completely numerous villages in the northern Gargano area with the most severe damage located between S Severo and Lesina The earthquake excited a tsunami with the most impressive effects in proximity of the Lesina Lake where the most reliable contemporary chronicles report about an initial sea water withdrawal of about 2 miles and a subsequent penetration inland

Cascadia's Fault Jerry Thompson, 2011-05-01 There is a crack in the earth's crust that runs roughly 31 miles offshore approximately 683 miles from Northern California up through Vancouver Island off the coast of British Columbia The Cascadia Subduction Zone has generated massive earthquakes over and over again throughout geologic time at least thirty six major events in the last 10 000 years This fault generates a monster earthquake about every 500 years And the monster is due to return at any time It could happen 200 years from now or it could be tonight The Cascadia Subduction Zone is virtually identical to the offshore fault that wrecked Sumatra in 2004 It will generate the same earthquake we saw in Sumatra at magnitude nine or higher sending crippling shockwaves across a far wider area than any California quake Slamming into Sacramento Portland Seattle Victoria and Vancouver it will send tidal waves to the shores of Australia New Zealand and Japan damaging the economies of the Pacific Rim countries and their trading partners for years to come In light of recent massive quakes in Haiti Chile and Mexico Cascadia's Fault not only tells the story of this potentially devastating earthquake and the tsunamis it will spawn it also warns us about an impending crisis almost unprecedented in modern history
