Dangerous Society:

Dangerous Society Carl S. Taylor, 1990 America is experiencing a serious problem with urban youth gangs Teenagers are becoming involved at an alarming rate in the deadly business of drug trafficking and murdering to protect that business Our traditional juvenile justice system designed to deal with lesser infractions of the law is not meeting this challenge This investigation offers a starting point from which we might begin to combat the urban youth gangs in Detroit as well as the many other areas experiencing similar problems No community urban suburban or rural has escaped the far reaching effects of drug related crime No one is immune The Ethics of Medical Involvement in Capital Punishment Joseph B.R.

Gaie, 2006-04-11 The morality of capital punishment has been debated for a long time This however has 1 not resulted in the settlement of the question either way Philosophers are still divided In this work I am not addressing the morality of capital punishment per se My question is different but related It is this Whether or not capital punishment is morally right is it moral or immoral for medical doctors to be involved in the practice To deal with this question I start off in Chapter One delineating the sort of involvement the medical associations consider to be morally problematic for medical doctors in capital punishment They make a distinction between what they call 2 medicalisation of and involvement in capital punishment and argue that there is a moral distinction between the two Whilst it is morally acceptable for doctors to be involved in capital punishment according to the medical associations it is immoral to medicalise the practice I clarify this position and show what moral issues arise I then suggest that there should not be a distinction between the two The medical associations argue that the medicalisation of capital punishment especially the use by medical doctors of lethal injection to execute condemned prisoners is immoral and therefore should be prohibited because it involves doctors in doing what is against the aims of medicine
