Yovits, 1980 Praise for the Series Mandatory for academic libraries supporting computer science departments CHOICES Since its first volume in 1960 Advances in Computers has presented detailed coverage of innovations in computer hardware software theory design and applications It has also provided contributors with a medium in which they can explore their subjects in greater depth and breadth than journal articles usually allow As a result many articles have become standard references that continue to be of significant lasting value in this rapidly expanding field      Data Base Management Systems David Kruglinski, 1983 Defines the Capabilities of the Three DBMS Tested Criteria for Evaluating Commercially Available Packages      The Data Base Environment Ken S. Introduced forty years ago relational databases proved unusually successful and durable However relational database systems were not designed for modern applications and computers As a result specialized database systems now proliferate trying to capture various pieces of the database market Database research is pulled into different directions and specialized database conferences are created Yet the current chaos in databases is likely only temporary because every technology including databases becomes standardized over time The history of databases shows periods of chaos followed by periods of dominant technologies For example in the early days of computing users stored their data in text files in any format and organization they wanted These early days were followed by information retrieval systems which required some structure for text documents such as a title authors and a publisher The information retrieval systems were followed by database systems which added even more structure to the data and made querying easier In the late 1990s the emergence of the Internet brought a period of relative chaos and interest in unstructured and semistructured data as it was envisioned that every webpage would be like a page in a book However with the growing maturity of the Internet the interest in structured data was regained because the most popular websites are in fact based on databases The question is not whether future data stores need structure but what structure they need      Monthly Catalogue, United States Public Documents, 1994      Database Machines A. K. Sood, A. H. Qureshi, 1986 This volume consists of a collection of 28 papers presented at the NATO Advanced Study Institute held July 14 27 1985 in the beautiful resort at Les Arcs France The director of this ASI was A K Sood and A H Qureshi was the co director Since its introduction in the early 1970s the relational data model has been widely accepted Several research and industrial efforts are being undertaken to develop special purpose database machines to implement the relational model In addition database machines are being explored for applications such as image processing and information retrieval In this NATO ASI the lecturers discussed special purpose database machine architectures from the viewpoint of architecture and hardware detail software user needs theoretical framework and applications The papers presented were of two types regular papers and short papers The research in database machines is being conducted in several countries This fact is under scored when it is noted that papers in this volume are authored by researchers in France Germany Italy Japan Portugal Turkey U K and U S A The first paper discusses the experience and applications of users with a commercially available database machine In the following eight papers the characteristics of six database machines are discussed The second third and fourth papers deal with the RDBM project at the Technical University of Braunschweig Germany Zeidler discusses the design objectives architecture and system design of RDBM Teich presents the hardware utilized for sorting
