Scientific Inquiry Cycle: Review

Science helps communities solve problems by applying knowledge and inventing things. Often "small" work is done (such as water testing or waste management) using science to make or improve solutions that have a positive impact. Understanding the problem fully, including its causes and effects, is the first step in finding an effective solution.

Designing solutions requires considering various conditions, such as budget, time, and safety concerns. Sometimes, important parts of a solution might be challenging, so it is important to weigh these trade-offs carefully. For example, creating materials for a house that are affordable to build and easy to use, cannot influence the effectiveness of the solution.

After identifying a solution, determining how it works, what conditions affected it, and any compromises that have already been or should be made on the idea. Communication, using design models, and reflecting on the results of the solution are important steps. This process can help identify areas that need further improvement, encourage decision-making, and build communication skills.
