Cohesion Policy And European Integration Building Multi Level Governance:

Cohesion Policy and European Integration Liesbet Hooghe,1996 How can one convince potent nation states to put their sovereignty at risk in common European policies EU cohesion policy now one third of the EU budget provides such a puzzle Until 1988 the European Commission shared out money to national governments with few strings attached Since the reform of 1988 national governments are required to negotiate with the Commission and regional authorities on how to use the money Has this European wide policy eroded national sovereignty in favour of a stronger role for the Commission and more power for Europe s regions The first part of the book probes into the policy dynamics at the European level In the second part eight country studies evaluate the impact of uniform EU policy on territorial relations by comparing policy making before and after the reform The concluding section explains persistent variation in EU cohesion decision making and implementation

Cohesion Policy and European Integration Liesbet Hooghe,1996 This work is a sustained study of cohesion policy in the European Union which now absorbs one third of the EU budget The central question is how policy makers can develop a common European policy and yet give attention to the variation in practice institutions and players in the member states

Cohesion Policy and European Integration Liesbet Hooghe,1996 Multi-Level Governance and European Integration Liesbet Hooghe,Gary Marks,2002-05-30 European politics has been reshaped in recent decades by a dual process of centralization and decentralization At the same time that authority in many policy areas has shifted to the supranational level of the European Union so national governments have given subnational regions within countries more say over the lives of their citizens At the forefront of scholars who characterize this dual process as Omulti level governance OLiesbet Hooghe and Gary Marks argue that its emergence in the second half of the twentieth century is a watershed in the political development of Europe Hooghe and Marks explain why multi level governance has taken place and how it shapes conflict in national and European political arenas Drawing on a rich body of original research the book is at the same time written in a clear and accessible style for undergraduates and non experts

Governance through Europeanisation of Regional Administration? - A Network Analysis of Baden-Württemberg s European Strategy Stefan Seidendorf, 2002-10-17 Thesis M A from the year 2001

in the subject Politics Topic European Union grade 17 20 excellent College of Europe Department of Politics language English abstract Abstract This paper investigates on the regions in Europe It focuses on the role of the Brussels Office and takes an empirical approach via two case studies The first chapter deals with theoretical considerations The nature and definition of policy networks are introduced by the models of Rhodes and Marsh The importance of dependency of the different networking actors on each other is illustrated To assess an actor within the network one has to understand the extent to which he can control and mobilize resources However limits of this approach concentration on participants not on influence are shown Secondly the implications of globalisation and europeanisation for the regions are shown The new complexity makes the region deal directly with the European level Within this multi level governance the mobilisation of regional resources is crucial Civil society plays an important part The question if these changes towards europeanisation of the administration are new governance is raised The limits of this concept are assessed When governance means steering processes rather than controlling territory this may well occur in networks The question nevertheless of the legitimacy of these networks remains Thirdly the role of the Regional Office is presented with the historic reasons for its establishment and the evolution of its role A distinction between the Early Warning Function and the Platform Function is made The first case concerns the gathering of information on Commission proposals and the way to deal with these informations The project of a regional European human resources strategy is evoked In building up a Euro pool the region creates the necessary human resources to send experts into the Commission as well as having the opportunity to take Europe home To be present as a state actor on the European scene the region needs a platform provided by the regional office One promising way is the added value of transnational interest coalitions Accordingly the two case studies belong one to the field of Early Warning another one to the region as a European actor With consideration of the project of Beate Kohler Koch the specific features of the Baden W rttemberg Network are presented and two appropriate cases defined

Multi-level Governance in the European Union Thomas Conzelmann, 2008 In recent years the debate on the future institutional shape of the European Union has centred on the Constitutional Treaty and the Lisbon Treaty as its less ambitious but possibly equally abortive successor The debate has thus neglected the emergence of a wide variety of new and multi level forms of governing The present volume takes stock of these debates and asks critical questions about policy conflicts and the effectiveness and legitimacy of these forms of governance Under what conditions can they stand up to the high expectations that are put in them by their supporters The volume offers reflections on the notion of network governance Multi Level Governance and the difficult issue of democratic accountability as well as empirical case studies from the structural funds area as well as from environmental policy broadly conceived

Does EU Regional Policy have a future and will Latvia be able to benefit from it? Chris Breuer, 2004-12-15 Master's Thesis from the year 2004 in the subject Politics Topic European Union grade 2.0 B University of Münster 48 language English abstract In this thesis I took a closer look at the second largest and most flexible policy field of the EU Regional Policy At present there are debates about the future of EU Regional Policy closely linked to the current debate about the EU budget for the planning period 2007-2013 for it is this budget that sets the boundaries for the financial resources of EU Regional Policy I assume that the future of the EU its acceptance within the community and its legitimacy by the community is dependent on the outcome of this ongoing debates and the future of regional policy By analysing the developments and the ongoing debates concerning EU Regional Policy so far I give prospects for the future of the EU in general and EU Regional Policy in particular The eastern enlargement is highly influencing regional policy and will result in a financial shift from west to east I used Latvia as a case study to show in what way concrete structures of a post Soviet state are being influenced and developed In order to investigate and do the appropriate research concerning my case study I lived in Riga the capital and political Walhalla of Latvia for half a year By being there and participating in seminars and congresses and by carrying out a project with a main focus to bridge the information gap between local Latvian authorities and the EU I got a good overview how the different governmental officials but the normal people as well judge the EU and EU Regional Policy in particular I learned that regional policy is extremely subject to the spectators view The judgement of EU Regional Policy depends on different political social and moral argumentations That the angle on how to look at the topic is very different seems obvious Let's take a Latvian mayor who is also part time farmer as an example Although he is interested in EU support he is barely able to fulfil the administrative and material conditions necessary to be eligible for EU support His Dutch colleague on the other hand is concerned about the financing of his relatively efficient local administration and he might judge financial support to weaker EU regions as competition This example shows the different starting points The decision making process shows similar disparities At the moment there is a clear gap between net contributors and net beneficiaries within the Union They have not come to a compromise concerning EU Regional Policy and the budget yet
