

Desertification

The image shows a wide, flat landscape under a pale, overcast sky. The ground is a mix of light brown and tan soil, appearing dry and cracked in places. In the middle ground, there are several small, sparse, and somewhat dead-looking shrubs and trees. A denser line of taller, greener trees forms a horizon line in the background. The overall scene conveys a sense of aridity and environmental degradation.

Desertification is accelerating in dryland regions due in part to repetitive drought, unsustainable soil management and overgrazing.

Dryland Management The Desertification Problem:

Dryland Management Ridley Nelson, 1990 Dryland Management: the "desertification" Problem Ridley Nelson, Banco Mundial, 1990 Economics of Dryland Management John A. Dixon, David E. James, Paul B. Sherman, 2013-11-05 We have always had land in which the agricultural productivity is limited because there is not enough moisture Systems of farming and burning often degrade dryland further until it is desert Today however the problem is becoming much more serious Over 20 per cent of the world s population lives in dryland areas and unless action is taken drylands will increase dramatically This book focuses on the people who live and farm in the drylands their use of land resources and the economic returns from their decisions In a clear and thorough economic appraisal the authors show how it is still possible to arrest the problem Originally published in 1989 The Future of Drylands Cathy Lee, Thomas Schaaf, 2008-11-14 Drylands have been cradles to some of the world s greatest civilizations and contemporary dryland communities feature rich and unique cultures Dryland ecosystems support a surprising amount of biodiversity Desertification however is a significant land degradation problem in the arid semi arid and dry sub humid regions of the world Deterioration of soil and plant cover has adversely affected 70% of the world s drylands as a result of extended droughts as well as mismanagement of range and cultivated lands The situation is likely to worsen with high population growth rates and accompanying land use conflicts The contributions to The Future of Drylands an international scientific conference held under the leadership of UNESCO address these issues and offer practical solutions for combating desertification along with conserving and sustainably managing dryland ecosystems Major themes include the conservation of dryland biological and cultural diversity and the human dryland interface This volume documents how our improved understanding of drylands provides insight into the health and future prospects of these precious ecosystems that should help ensure that dryland communities enjoy a sustainable future Dryland Management: Economic Case Studies John A. Dixon, David E. James, Paul B. Sherman, 2013-11-05 Drylands are a sizeable part of the world s potentially arable land They vary from the hyper arid regions of the classic deserts of Africa and Asia to the more common semi arid and sub humid areas that support extensive agricultural systems dependent on rainfall or irrigation Following their successful and innovative work The Economics of Dryland Management the editors have assembled twenty case studies from nine countries in the continents of Africa Asia North America and Australia They help to explore more fully the costs of land degradation and illustrate the economics of reclamation rehabilitation and prevention The cases in this book present a rich varied and readable survey of a wide range of drylands and their resources Originally published in 19990 The Environment and Emerging Development Issues Partha Dasgupta, Karl-Göran Mäler, 2000 Two and a half billion people are affected directly on a day to day basis by the allocation and use of purely local resources Yet official development economics has concentrated on headline international issues and only recently begun to take account of the dependence of poor countries on their natural resources the link between acute poverty and environmental degradation and the problems associated with the management of local common property such as soil and soil cover water forests and their products animals and fisheries In this volume part of the WIDER Program on the Economics of the Environment expert contributors provide a set of authoritative studies of emerging development issues ranging from foundational matters to case studies original research in areas where there has been a paucity of work to survey papers They address both analytic and empirical issues on the role of environmental resources in the development process presenting explanations of existing situations and policies for the future A wealth of interests and backgrounds is represented and reflected in the cross fertilization between papers

Dryland Degradation Ebbe Poulsen, J. E. Lawesson, 1991 This volume contains abstracts and papers presented at the second Danish Sahel Workshop held at Sandbjerg Manor in 1990 The papers cover natural and social sciences such as improved utilisation of tree legumes degradations and desertification afforestation techniques and problems ecological monitoring and remote sensing techniques animal counting in Senegal the political economy of agricultural development in Burkina Faso research and development in the Red Sea area the economic potential of the semi arid areas as well as accounts of the research sponsored by DANIDA integrated projects in Mali and Senegal and the Danish activities with control of parasitic diseases in Africa

International Environmental Law and Policy in Africa B. Chaytor, K.R. Gray, 2013-11-11 C O OKID11 I welcome the opportunity to prepare a Foreword to the book on Environmental Policy and Law in Africa edited by Kevin R Gray and Beatrice Chaytor It is a pleasure to do that because the book is a contribution to the cause of capacity building for development and implementation of environmental law in Africa a goal towards which I have had an undivided focus over the last two decades There is still some belief in and outside Africa that for developing countries in general and Africa in particular development and implementation of environmental law is not a priority This belief prevails strongly in many quarters of the industrialised countries In fact the view is held either out of blatant ignorance or by some renegade industrialists who fail to appreciate Michael Royston s 1979 thesis that Pollution Prevention Pays 2 That group for obvious reasons must have their correspondent counterparts in Africa to provide hope that industries rejected as derelict in the West or inoperable due to rigorous environmental regulation can find homes to which they can escape and dump their polluting industries

Social Aspects of Sustainable Dryland Management Daniel Stiles, 1995-06-20 With dryland areas accommodating approximately one billion people in over a hundred countries there is obviously a problem of increased stress being placed on the natural resources of these areas which ultimately contributes to overall land degradation Coupled with this many developing countries particularly in Africa are showing a fall in agricultural production per capita with people migrating away from dryland areas such relocation to marginal lands and forests or to already over populated cities further enhances global land degradation With this in mind Social Aspects of Sustainable Dryland Management attempts to address the overall problem of land degradation and provides ways in which dryland productivity and viability can be increased and managed for future years The volume bases its results on case studies and field research projects and encourages a greater involvement of the local population in developing methods of management of their own natural resources This volume therefore embodies a concept of development far beyond conventional methods It aims to show that land management must develop around the priorities needs and objectives of the people concerned and emphasises the need to involve local people in solving the problems of resource degradation so that future research and modern technologies can be developed with their participation Above all it seeks to recognise the value of indigenous knowledge in sustainable development so that such knowledge systems can become the starting point from which to plan management strategies and new technological adaptations Sowing the Seeds for Sustainability Rachel Wiseman, Liz Hopkins, 2001 Agriculture is one of the most important influences on biological diversity Conventional agriculture has heavily contributed to reducing the diversity of ecosystems species and genes but it has also created new diversity The eighth Interactive Session of the 2nd World Conservation Congress dealt with a broad spectrum of agricultural issues from around the world and examined the linkages between biodiversity economy and society This publication represents the opinions and issues raised by those participating in the Session and it contains both the papers prepared by presenters and contributions from those unable to attend Good Practices in Drylands Management Ragnar Øygard, Trond Vedeld, Jens Aune, 1999 Introduction Global challenges of drylands management Pastoralism and rangeland management World bank response to pastoral development challenges Dryland farming and technological change Community based natural resources management in dryland agriculture Drought preparedness and risk mitigation Issues in strategy and project development and implementation Mainstreaming drylands management activities in world bank country assistance strategies Conclusion
