The Little Virtues and the Little Defects of a Young Girl ... By a Chaplain CHAPLAIN.,1871 A Daughter of France Constance Elizabeth Maud,1909 The Social Epistemology of Legal Trials Zachary Hoskins,Jon Robson,2021-02-16 This collection is the first book length examination of the various epistemological issues underlying legal trials Trials are centrally concerned with determining truth whether a criminal defendant has in fact culpably committed the act of which they are accused or whether a civil defendant is in fact responsible for the damages alleged by the plaintiff Truth is not however the only epistemic value which seems relevant to how trials proceed We may think that a jury shouldn t convict a defendant even one who is as a matter of fact guilty unless its members know or at least are justified in believing that the defendant committed the crime in question Similarly we might reasonably assume that the trier of fact must have some level of understanding to reach an adequate verdict in any case but legitimate questions arise as to what level of understanding should be required The essays collected in this volume consider a range of epistemological issues raised by trials such as how much credence jurors should give to eyewitness testimony the admissibility and role of statistical evidence and the appropriate standards of proof in different contexts The Social Epistemology of Legal Trials will be of interest to scholars and upper level students working on issues at the intersection of epistemology and philosophy of law
