

— “Child health experts recognise internationally that developmental care is vital to improve long-term health and wellbeing outcomes. A key challenge to the provision of quality developmental care in remote Australian Aboriginal communities has been the absence of culturally appropriate, structured developmental screening tools.”

Aboriginal Primary Health Care:

Aboriginal Primary Health Care Sophia Couzos, Richard Murray, 1999 Aboriginal Primary Health Care An Evidence Based Approach is a comprehensive treatment of primary health care issues affecting Aboriginal people in Australia Using best practice models developed by Aboriginal Community Controlled Health Services and exemplifying the World Health Organization's declaration on primary health care this book aims to assist those working the field of Aboriginal health to understand the evidence based behind primary care interventions Aboriginal Primary Health Care describes clearly and systematically how Aboriginal health is affected by the burden of suffering poverty overcrowding and poor nutrition The evidence for various preventative measures is assessed including screening chemoprophylaxis vaccination and strategies of population behaviour change Recommendations for way of implementing these measures are discussed Issues surrounding implementation are also canvassed for example the use of information technology to develop processes that can be integrated into clinical practice to ensure sustainable preventive routines and performance indicators for in service use

Primary health care and continuous quality improvement Alison Laycock, Ross Bailie, Lynette O'Donoghue, 2025-06-01 For most people the main point of access to the health system is through primary health care PHC The fundamental premise of primary health care is that all people everywhere have the right to receive the appropriate care in their community Primary health care attends to the majority of a person's health needs throughout their lifetime including physical mental and social wellbeing PHC is people centred rather than disease centred It is a whole of society approach that includes health promotion disease prevention treatment rehabilitation and palliative care Primary health care and continuous quality improvement An evidence based guide provides an accessible contemporary guide on implementing continuous quality improvement CQI in PHC settings The authors draw together two decades of practical experience and established leadership in Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander health in Australia to provide guidance for health services and their staff policymakers researchers funders and support organisations in an international context Primary health care and continuous quality improvement provides an in depth understanding of how CQI can be used to strengthen health systems by identifying core concepts underpinning CQI in PHC and how CQI can improve health care quality health equity and population health explaining how CQI data is used in a comprehensive approach to PHC to measure quality and how data is generated and used for improving care describing CQI tools and techniques used by PHC teams offering guidance in interpreting data and addressing variation in care quality providing case studies in maternal health children's health mental health and other areas to describe the application of CQI to improve clinical care guiding practitioners on how to collaborate and build data systems for CQI and strengthen links between communities and PHC services Continuous quality improvement is everybody's business and Primary health care and continuous quality improvement explains the strategic use of CQI at different levels of the health system and across sectors to achieve and sustain large scale health improvement Oxford Textbook of Primary Medical Care Roger Jones (Prof.),2005 Aboriginal Healthworkers Bill Genat,William Genat,2006 Aboriginal healthworkers are employed by Australian primary health care services to help bridge the gap between the Western medical clinic and their own kin Much controversy surrounds what they can and should be doing Aboriginal Healthworkers looks at what healthworkers do what they think about their work and how their work is perceived by doctors nurses social workers transport workers and crucially their Aboriginal clients The author s unique contribution brings ethnographic methods to his study of a group of urban healthworkers and allows their voices to be heard Healthworkers speak frankly about the state of Aboriginal primary health care in Australia Daily visits to homes of families whose health continues to be eroded by the historical legacy of exclusion cultural oppression and racism highlight the serious lack of professional recognition and support In response this powerful book portrays the unique healing practice offered by Aboriginal healthworkers and urges that practical steps be taken to bolster their holistic approach Aboriginal Nutrition and the Nyirranggung Health Strategy in Jawoyn Country John Taylor,Neil Westbury,2000 Uses a conceptual framework that shows the relationship between health outcomes and the food and nutrition system to examine the food systems in the communities of the Katherine East region social and economic factors that impede improved outcomes community stores measurement of nutritional and health status lessons for the Nyirranggung Health Strategy and for the development of primary health care services Promoting the Health of Indigenous Australians National Health and Medical Research Council (Australia).
