themselves in a party The whole working class therefore does not belong to the party but its best and most energetic members does These members lead the others To the workers party the Bolsheviks the best workers and peasants attach them selves to the party of the landlords and capitalists Party of Peoples Freedom the most ener getic landlords capitalists and their servants lawyers professors officers etc belong Consequently every party represents the most thoughtful members of its class There fore a landlord or capitalist who is in an organized party can better fight workers and peasants than one who is not Similarly organized workers can more successfully fight capitalists and landlords than those who are unorganized
The former have re ected upon the aims and the interests of the working class they know how these interests can best be served and they know the shortest way to their goal All those aims which a party strives to realize while representing the interests of its floss constitute a party program In the program is therefore shown what a cer tain class aspires to In the program of the Communist Party is consequently shown what the workers and poor peasants strive for A program is a most
