

DIANA I. AGREST

An aerial, high-angle photograph of a city, likely New York City, showing a dense grid of buildings. Overlaid on this image are several architectural drawings, including floor plans and elevations, which appear to be floating or layered over the city's structure. The drawings are in white and light gray, contrasting with the dark, somewhat desaturated tones of the city below. The overall composition suggests a connection between physical urban space and architectural theory.
