analysing the interconnection between a building's form, construction and function. Their architectural and social significance is examined in five separate essays that precede the documentation. Difficult though it may be to classify individual buildings according to shared functional, constructional and formal characteristics, this does not mean that it is impossible to discern certain lines of development running through Dutch architectural production. Those lines are clearly set out in a removable calendar. One hundred representative buildings, one for each year, are placed chronologically against the backdrop of technological and social developments. The calendar traces a path for today's designers through the maze of stories about architecture to the buildings themselves. Back cover
