Chapter scenario

Mary from the chapter scenario in the previous chapter has done well at university. Five years ago she graduated with a PhD in social psychology, and now she has a tenured position at a university. Mary is a keen observer of everyday life and tries to combine her interests and research where possible. This includes trying to understand intimate relationships and perhaps why she broke up with Trevor after eight years together. The relationship with Trevor ended during Mary's PhD, in part due to the travel involved in his consultancy job and her need to focus on the PhD and supporting her family.

Tonight Mary is going out with Carla and Alice to a speed dating session at the local pub. Carla and Alice have become regulars at such events and fill her in on the process. Alice states, "It'll be fun. You get to meet a whole bunch of guys, and if you don't hit it off it doesn't matter 'cos they don't get your details." Mary has read up on such events and states, "Did you know there's research on speed dating. It's attracting quite a bit of attention in the social relations literature – should be pretty interesting." Carla replies, "As long as you don't lose sight of the real job, and that's finding someone." Alice
