

THE STUDY OF ISLAM IN LOCAL CONTEXTS<sup>1</sup>

by: Leif O. Manger
Center for Development Studies, Bergen.

(Paper read on February 28, 1991, as the first of two obligatory lectures in defence of the Doctor of Philosophy-degree at the University of Bergen).

The empirical context for this talk is "local Islam." The topic may at first glance seem very fashionable indeed, and the current political context is of course the main reason; but on the other hand the topic may seem somewhat to be out of date. Anthropological research is to an increasing degree turning away from concepts like "local" and "locality" claiming it is the wider regional and global contexts, including the globalization of culture that counts. And a quick glance at the Muslim world may give the same impression. The wave of fundamentalism seems to be rolling over local communities, providing a ready-made, package-like interpretation of the world, informing action, however medieval it may seem. In these contexts anthropologists seem to be uncomfortable. We know too little about Islamic theology to know which particular place in the Holy Scripture is producing a certain effect. We also know too little about the Islamic past to tell which historical period a current event is reflecting. But at this very point we also find the starting point for our counter-offensive. Contemporary societies are reflecting neither holy scriptures nor earlier history. Such elements are certainly there as contributing factors, but so are contemporary politics and economics. Our task is to show how all these things come together to create peoples reality. And that is what my talk is about.

Some earlier analyses

A whole range of anthropological contributions can assist us in this search for understanding Islam. One position is that Islam is a heterogeneous collection of items, each of which belongs to Islam because local informants say so. Gilzenan's "Recognizing Islam" may serve as one example of this position, that Islam is what Muslims everywhere say it is, thus leading up to a world of many Islams. A second position is the one represented by Ernest Gellner, notably represented in his "Muslim Society." Islam is here depicted as a distinctive historical totality which organizes various aspects of social life. Social structure, religious belief and political activity go together to an extent that Islam becomes the blueprint of the social order. We know his descriptions of Islam in the Moroccan countryside, with segmentary tribes and the saint, marabout being the religious representative, to Islam of the town with institutions of

Max Weber in Asian Studies Andreas E. Buss,1985-01-01 Lived Islam A. Kevin Reinhart,2020-06-11 Does Islam make people violent Does Islam make people peaceful In this book A Kevin Reinhart demonstrates that such questions are misleading because they assume that Islam is a monolithic essence and that Muslims are made the way they are by this monolith He argues that Islam like all religions is complex and thus best understood through analogy with language Islam has dialects a set of features shared with other versions of Islam It also has cosmopolitan elites who prescribe how Islam ought to be even though these experts depending on where they practice the religion unconsciously reflect their own local dialects Reinhart defines the distinctive features of Islam and investigates how modernity has created new conditions for the religion Analyzing the similarities and differences between modern and pre modern Islam he clarifies the new and old in the religion as it is lived in the contemporary world

Transnational Muslim Politics Peter G. Mandaville,2003-08-27 This radical book argues that translocal forces are leading the emergence of a wider Muslim public sphere It will be invaluable for researchers in international relations Islamic studies cultural studies sociology religion and politics

Islamization and Native Religion in the Golden Horde Devin DeWeese,2010-11-01 This book is the first substantial study of Islamization in any part of Inner Asia from any perspective and the first to emphasize conversion narratives as important sources for understanding the dynamics of Islamization Challenging the prevailing notions of the nature of Islam in Inner Asia it explores how conversion to Islam was woven together with indigenous Inner Asian religious values and thereby incorporated as a central and defining element in popular discourse about communal origins and identity The book traces the many echoes of a single conversion narrative through six centuries the previously unknown recounting of the dramatic contest in which the khan zbek adopted Islam at the behest of a Sufi saint named Baba T kles DeWeese provides the English language translation of this and another text as well as translations and analyses of a wide range of passages from historical sources and epic and folkloric materials Not only does this study deepen our understanding of the peoples of Central Asia involved in so much turmoil today but it also provides a model for other scholars to emulate in looking at the process of Islamization and communal religious conversion in general as it occurred elsewhere in the world

Rectifying God's Name James D. Frankel,2011-01-31 Islam first arrived in China more than 1 200 years ago but for more than a millennium it was perceived as a foreign presence The restoration of native Chinese rule by the Ming dynasty 1368 1644 after nearly a century of Mongol domination helped transform Chinese intellectual discourse on ideological social political religious and ethnic identity This led to the creation of a burgeoning network of Sinicized Muslim scholars who wrote about Islam in classical Chinese and developed a body of literature known as the Han Kitab Rectifying God s Name examines the life and work of one of the most important of the Qing Chinese Muslim literati Liu Zhi ca 1660 ca 1730 and places his writings in their historical cultural social and religio philosophical context His Tianfang danli Ritual law of Islam represents the most systematic and sophisticated attempt within the Han Kitab corpus to harmonize Islam with Chinese thought The volume begins by situating Liu Zhi in the historical development of the Chinese Muslim intellectual tradition examining his sources and influences as well as his legacy Delving into the contents of Liu Zhi s work it focuses on his use of specific Chinese terms and concepts their origins and meanings in Chinese thought and their correspondence to Islamic principles A close examination of the Tianfang dianli reveals Liu Zhi s specific usage of the concept of Ritual as a common foundation of both Confucian morality and social order and Islamic piety The challenge of expressing such concepts in a context devoid of any clear monotheistic principle tested the limits of his scholarship and linguistic finesse Liu Zhi s theological discussion in the Tianfang dianli engages not only the ancient Confucian tradition but also Daoism Buddhism and even non Chinese traditions His methodology reveals an erudite and cosmopolitan scholar who synthesized diverse influences from Sufism to Neo Confucianism and possibly even Jesuit and Jewish sources into a body of work that was both steeped in tradition and yet exceedingly original epitomizing the phenomenon of Chinese Muslim simultaneity A compelling and multidimensional study Rectifying God s Name will be eagerly welcomed by interested readers of Chinese and Islamic religious and social history as well as students and scholars of comparative religion
