Cathodic Protection Systems for Civil Works Structures U. S. Army Corps of Engineers,2004-10 This manual provides guidance for the selection design installation operation and maintenance of cathodic protection systems for navigation lock gates and other civil works hydraulic structures The primary corrosion control method for civil works hydraulic structures is a protective coating system most often paint Where the paint system and structure are submerged in water a combination of the anodic and cathodic properties of materials the liquid electrolyte and external electrical circuits combine to form electrochemical corrosion cells and corrosion naturally follows Cathodic protection systems can supplement the paint coating system to mitigate corrosion damage

Engineer Manual EM 1110-2.2704 Engineering and Design United States Government Us Army,2021-04-22 This United States Army Corps of Engineers publication Engineer Manual EM 1110 2 2704 Engineering and Design Cathodic Protection Systems for Civil Works Structures March 2021 provides guidance and requirements for the selection design installation operation and maintenance of CPS for navigation lock gates and other U S Army Corps of Engineers USA CE CW hydraulic steel structures HSS It may also be applicable to other types of structures and components depending on the specific application This manual also discusses possible solutions to some of the problems with CPS that may be encountered at existing projects For all Corrosion Prevention and Control CPC activities on HSS projects it is critical to ensure compliance with this manual and other corrosion prevention criteria documents referenced below This is to ensure that corrosion prevention activities including selection and implementation of protective coatings materials and CPS remain consistent across all USACE organizations

Cathodic Protection of Civil Works Structures ,1979 This report lists various design considerations for cathodic protection systems and provides several examples of such systems It also contains the results of field surveys of U S Army Corps of Engineers CE installations which have used or are using cathodic protection on hydraulic structures These surveys indicate that 1 graphite slab anodes can be softened by oxygen attack 2 unprotected sausage anodes are often damaged by river debris and 3 button anodes resist river debris and ice damage button anodes examined during the survey were found to have performed well over a period of 7 years In addition it was determined that the current requirement for cathodic protection of 1 sq ft 0 092 sq m of bare steel in aerated water is 2 mA sq ft 22 mA sq m However since cathodic protection current increases with water velocity a square root dependence was measured using a cylindrical specimen rotating at a surface velocity of up tp 4 ft s 1 2 m s Finally it was determined that platinized anodes have a good potential for application in impressed current cathodic protection systems Author
