

Animal Structure and Function - MAMMALS

LS1.A: Structure and Function - All organisms have external parts. Different animals use their body parts in different ways to see, hear, grasp objects, protect themselves, move from place to place, and seek, find, and take in food, water and air.

Mammals are covered with hair or fur (except for marine mammals), which helps to keep them warm (or cool). Fur color can help them hide from predators or sneak up on prey.

Mammals use their mouths, teeth, hands, paws and claws to grasp things, carry young, tear food, and defend themselves and their family members.

Mammals move from place to place by walking, running, swimming, jumping or flying (bats). They move to escape predators, chase prey, stay together in a herd and find food, shelter, and mates.

Mammals use hearing, vision and sense of smell (these vary greatly between species) to find food and mates, care for young and escape predators.

Female mammals have mammary glands, so can feed helpless newborns nutritious milk.
