The Third Macedonian War and Battle of Pydna Graham Wrightson, 2024-02-01 provides general audiences with a serviceable history of the Third Macedonian War and an overview of Macedonian military institutions in the Hellenistic Era The Journal of Military History The Third Roman Macedonian War was a disaster for Macedon a defeat leading to the end of that kingdom s independence This is usually attributed to an innate superiority of the Roman legionary tactics over the Macedonian system Graham Wrightson on the other hand argues that the blame lies entirely with Perseus the last king of Macedon He analyzes the whole war following the primary source accounts and focusing on Perseus military decisions and his battlefield strategies It confirms the prevailing view of the sources that Perseus was too hesitant and non committal in his early conduct of the war More significantly it argues that Perseus mishandled the Macedonian army when it comes to combined arms tactics by adopting a defensive posture particularly at the final battle of Pydna The Macedonian military system based on a slow sarissa phalanx is suited entirely to an offensive battle plan coordinating a frontally irresistible phalanx in the centre and a rapid heavy cavalry attack on one wing Most importantly though Perseus refused to spend money to hire 10 000 Gallic horsemen and the lack of cavalry cost him the initiative and the victory This is a fascinating and thoroughly researched study of these dramatic events that adds fresh insight to the question of the legion s supposed supremacy over the phalanx
