Advances In Concurrency Control Transaction Processing:

Executive Briefing Krithi Ramamritham, Panos K. Chrysanthis, 1997 Advances in Concurrency Control and Transaction Processing addresses developments in transaction processing and the motivation for transactions and basic transaction concepts. The briefing begins with a thorough discussion of traditional transaction processing and leads into more advanced techniques that depend on the programmer providing additional input parameters enabling the system to process transactions in a more sophisticated way. The briefing examines current transaction advances in terms of their relative strengths, weaknesses, and appropriateness. It also concentrates on techniques based on sophisticated extensions to traditional concurrency control, recovery, and processing protocols that do not affect the way transactions are programmed. It reviews techniques based on the semantics of the data and operations and improvements in the performance of traditional transactions. New correctness criteria are also discussed, and the briefing concludes with a discussion of transaction processing trends.

Database Concurrency Control Alexander Thomasian, 2013-03-09 Database Concurrency Control Methods Performance and Analysis is a review of developments in concurrency control methods for centralized database systems with a quick digression into distributed databases and multicomputers, the emphasis being on performance. The main goals of Database Concurrency Control Methods Performance and Analysis are to succinctly specify various concurrency control methods, to describe models for evaluating the relative performance of concurrency control methods, to point out problem areas in earlier performance analyses, to introduce queuing network models to evaluate the baseline performance of transaction processing systems, to provide insights into the relative performance of transaction processing systems, to illustrate the application of basic analytic methods to the performance analysis of various concurrency control methods, to review transaction models which are intended to relieve the effect of lock contention, to provide guidelines for improving the performance of transaction processing systems due to concurrency control, and to point out areas for further investigation. This monograph should be of direct interest to computer scientists doing research on concurrency control methods for high performance transaction processing systems, designers of such systems, and professionals concerned with improving tuning the performance of transaction processing systems.

Advanced Transaction Models and Architectures Sushil Jajodia, Larry Kerschberg, 2012-12-06 Motivation Modern enterprises rely on database management systems (DBMS) to collect, store, and manage corporate data, which is considered a strategic corporate resource. Recently, with the proliferation of personal computers and departmental computing, the trend has been towards the decentralization and distribution of the computing infrastructure, with autonomy and responsibility for data now residing at the departmental and workgroup level of the organization. Users want their data delivered to their desktops, allowing them to incorporate data into their personal databases, spreadsheets, word processing documents, and most importantly, into their daily tasks and activities. They want to be able to share their information while retaining control over its access and distribution. There are also pressures from corporate leaders who wish to use information technology as a strategic resource in offering specialized value added services to customers Database technology is being used to manage the data associated with corporate processes and activities Increasingly the data being managed are not simply formatted tables in relational databases but all types of objects including unstructured text images audio and video Thus the database management providers are being asked to extend the capabilities of DBMS to include object relational models as well as full object oriented database management systems
