

THE BOOK

John Ray, Secretary of the Texas Historical Society and President Texas State Historical Survey Committee and President Historical Survey Committee.

This autobiographical sketch is presented in a pleasant narrative form, well written, the reader is taken the younger Carl Hahn's interesting and somewhat unusual experiences, the variety of which will make the reader and while at times one may feel that he is being deceived to more about such things as mining, ranching, prospecting and hunting that he needs to know. It is a delightful reading and one may expect to be fascinated by Mr. Hahn's amusing manner and almost total recall.

He is now Chief of the Austin Bureau for the Houston Chronicle, Mrs. McCord, Austin, Texas 1911 has this to say about "Confessions of a Proliferator".

"I'm delighted that this book is being published because it will be a worthwhile addition to a Texas or American collection."

C. L. Brewster, Ph.D., Dean of the Graduate Division of the University of Texas at El Paso.

"Will Rogers used to say that all he knew was what he read in the papers. Carl Hahn knows a good deal more than that. He knows what he saw and experienced in 'what was left of the Old West', a round the turn of the century, and he produces from a copious memory a remarkably detailed and convincing picture of that long vanished but always fascinating segment of the American experience."

Dale Walter, Managing Editor, San Angelo Standard-Times 1911.

"Likely never a man who has labored around the country and worked at an endless number of jobs has an interesting story to tell."

"Unfortunately, most haven't the facility for writing about their experiences such as Carl Hahn has."

"Because he has the ability to pass on his experiences to the reader and because he was unique among others -- his roaming and frequent job changes all aimed at a goal to become a writer -- his story should have an exalted place in lore of the Southwest."

"His ambition was to make his own way without the help of his well-to-do family and to make enough money to get the necessary education to become a writer -- specifically writer of the history of the Big Bend and the Davis Mountains country. Sound simple? Maybe, but the days of his young adulthood were hard times, and goals weren't easily attained."

"His solution led him 'hitchhiking' around the country, riding the rails to towns where he could work as a piano player, railroad, mine, union harvester, ranch hand, prospector, gambler's shill or at one of dozens of other jobs."

"Most of these experiences were in the first decade"
