- No source of ignition has to be taken inside unless the master or competent officer is satisfied.
- The number of persons entering should be constrained to the adequate number of persons who are actually needed inside for work.
- The rescue and resuscitation equipment are to be present outside the confined space. Rescue equipment includes breathing air apparatus and spare charge bottles.
- The oxygen content should read 21% by volume. Percentage less than that is not acceptable and more time for ventilation should be given in such circumstances.
- Enough lighting and illumination should be present in the enclosed space before entering.
