Conscience and Individual Responsibility in Society, 1978* Social Conscience and Responsibility Jane E. Bleasdale, Julie A. Sullivan, 2020-02-29 How we teach ethics has been an ambiguous instructional area for many years In religious schools it is left to the work of the religion teacher and in public schools it is often incorporated into a civics course Across the curriculum there are multiple points at which we can incorporate the study of ethics in interdisciplinary ways In this volume we will focus on how educators in high schools grades 9 12 can incorporate the teaching of ethics effectively across all disciplines Sciences Humanities Arts Math and Technology The introduction of the book will be a foundational description of ethics what it means to study ethics and to be an ethical person Power, Judgment and Political Evil Danielle Celermajer, 2016-04-08 In an interview with G nter Gaus for German television in 1964 Hannah Arendt insisted that she was not a philosopher but a political theorist Disillusioned by the cooperation of German intellectuals with the Nazis she said farewell to philosophy when she fled the country This book examines Arendt s ideas about thinking acting and political responsibility investigating the relationship between the life of the mind and the life of action that preoccupied Arendt throughout her life By joining in the conversation between Arendt and Gaus each contributor probes her ideas about thinking and judging and their relation to responsibility power and violence An insightful and intelligent treatment of the work of Hannah Arendt this volume will appeal to a wide number of fields beyond political theory and philosophy including law literary studies social anthropology and cultural history [The Philosophy of Human Responsibility. Consciousness and Moral Responsibility Jose Kam, 2019-01-10 Jose's work presents a basic theory of freedom and responsibility Cognitive neuroscience and psychology provide a great deal of evidence that our actions are often shaped by information about which we are not conscious Some psychologists have concluded that we are really conscious of very few facts whose responses we have But most people start to believe that we need to be conscious of the facts which we do Some thinkers have argued that this inexperienced notion is wrong and we do not need to be conscious of these facts to be responsible while others think that this is right and therefore we are never responsible Jose's work argues that both views are wrong He sets up a special account of the viewpoint of the Global Workspace and defends it and argues that this account emphasizes that consciousness plays a particularly important role in action We have sufficient control over the moral importance of our acts are only responsible for them when we are conscious of the facts which give our actions their moral character Apart from this our work is expressed that we are only in the form of ethical agents when we are conscious of these same facts Therefore there are good reasons to think that for a naive feeling moral responsibility requires consciousness it is really true Jose's work suggests that it insists that people are less responsible for what they have thought but the state of consciousness does not show that we are not morally responsible The Origins of Responsibility François Raffoul, 2010 François Raffoul approaches the concept of responsibility in a manner that is distinct from its traditional interpretation as accountability of the wilful subject Exploring responsibility in the works of Nietzsche Sartre Levinas Heidegger and Derrida Raffoul identifies decisive moments in the development of the concept retrieves its origins and explores new reflections on it For Raffoul responsibility is less about a sovereign subject establishing a sphere of power and control than about exposure to an event that does not come from us and yet calls to us These original and thoughtful investigations of the post-metaphysical senses of responsibility chart new directions for ethics in the continental tradition Responsibility in Mental Disease Henry Maudsley, 1876 The Elements of Ethics James Hervey Hyslop, 1895 The Contemporary Review, 1889

Consciousness and Moral Responsibility Andrew Williams, 2017-06-21 Andrew Williams presents an original theory of freedom and responsibility Cognitive neuroscience and psychology provide a great deal of evidence that our actions are often shaped by information of which we are not conscious some psychologists have concluded that we are actually conscious of very few of the facts we respond to But most people seem to assume that we need to be conscious of the facts we respond to in order to be responsible for what we do Some thinkers have argued that this naive assumption is wrong and we need not be conscious of these facts to be responsible while others think it is correct and therefore we are never responsible Williams argues that both views are wrong. He sets out and defends a particular account of consciousness: the global workspace view. He argues this account entails that consciousness plays an especially important role in action. We exercise sufficient control over the moral significance of our acts to be responsible for them only when we are conscious of the facts that give to our actions their moral character. Further, our actions are expressive of who we are as moral agents only when we are conscious of these same facts. There are therefore good reasons to think that the naive assumption that consciousness is needed for moral responsibility is in fact true. Williams suggests that this entails that people are responsible less often than we might have thought, but the consciousness condition does not entail that we are never morally responsible.
