Beyond Discourse Alexander M. Sidorkin,1999-07-27 Using Mikhail Bakhtin s concepts of dialogue and carnival and in connection with the ideas of Martin Buber Sidorkin explores the issues of difference and identity in a very postmodern view of the self He addresses the questions of what it really means to be human and likewise what truly makes a good school He takes dialogue beyond the framework of discourse making it an end in itself rather than a means toward better education His sojourn into a fifth grade classroom shows that basic forms of classroom talk which are normally thought to be distracting or educationally useless are proved to be valuable dialogical moments of discovery in schooling
