Beyond Conception Our Children's Children:

Beyond Conception Martha Kent Denniston, 2004-04 Overpopulation the most severe threat to human existence has been caused by individual human beings following habit rather than adapting their behavior to changing conditions The outcome is not in the lap of Fate it is in the hands of individuals able both to be single minded about their acts and to work with others In clear humane terms the author discusses all aspects of the dilemma historical economic religious political racial ecological and above all medical She presents unusual concepts fresh ideas and startling statistics with thoughtfulness and authority Over the last half century death control in the form of the elimination of killer diseases reduction of infant mortality and a great extension of adult life expectancy has created a rapidly worsening situation for which the only remedy is Birth Control employing known methods and others yet to be devised on a comparable scale In the United States not much positive initiative can be expected from government organized medicine the Catholic Church or business The impetus toward the small family toward one child a piece for each parent must come from informed and energetic citizens This book describes encouraging beginnings already made and suggests methods for much greater accomplishments Beyond Conception:
