

Beyond Discourse? Using Deleuze and Guattari's schizoanalysis to explore affective assemblages, heterosexually striated space, and lines of flight online and at school

JESSICA RINGROSE

London Institute of Education

Abstract

This paper explores how Deleuze and Guattari's philosophical concepts extend and elaborate discursive and psychoanalytic interpretations of qualitative research findings. Analyzing data from a UK research project exploring young people's engagements with Social Networking Sites (SNSs), Deleuze and Guattari's schizoanalytic method is drawn upon to consider complex desire-flows in the social. In particular the notion of 'affective assemblages' is developed to explore the relationships between school and online spaces and subjective interfacing with these spaces. The paper suggests online space is heterosexually striated and SNSs create new intensified gendered and sexualized identities and affective relations between young people. Investigating the case study of a teen girl, Louise, who is socially rejected through the affective assemblage of the SNS, then pathologized at school for violently retaliating against being called a 'fat slag' online, the paper suggests a Deleuzoguattarian analysis offers new theoretical tools for thinking about discursive subjectification but also for mapping complex desire-flows and micro movements through and against discursive/symbolic norms.

Keywords: Deleuze, Guattari, affect, desire, subjectification, social networking sites, cyber-bullying, teenagers, femininity

Introduction

In the call for papers for this special edition on the Power In/Of Language, it is noted that 'strategies and tactics of domination are often discursive—hidden beneath everyday language' and discursive tactics work to position the self and other. This is a common understanding in postmodern/poststructural educational theory that typically borrows from Foucault, to posit theories of 'discursive positionings' (e.g. Davies & Harre, 1990). New momentum in social thought is shifting focus from language/discourse to affect in what has been called the 'affective turn' (Clough & Halley, 2007). This turn underscores the importance of affect and embodiment in thinking
