De tempore Robert Kilwardby, Alexander Broadie, 1987 This volume makes available for the first time in English an invaluable source for medieval ideas on deep questions that will be familiar to present day students of philosophy The British philosopher theologian Robert Kilwardby wrote On Time and On Imagination in Oxford in the 1250s On Time discusses whether time is independent of mind investigates the nature of the unity of time and asks whether there is an analogue of time in the life of pure spirits On Imagination examines the nature of imagination and its relations to sensation and desire and ends with a lengthy section on the roles of head and heart in the exercise of common sense In both treatises Kilwardby struggles to reconcile the views of Aristotle and Augustine Broadie's introduction demonstrates how Kilwardby's acute intellect can help shed light on some perennial problems of philosophy The volume complements Father Lewry's Latin text edition of the two treatises Oxford 1987

Naming and Believing G.W. Fitch, 1986-11-30 The relationship between thought language and the world is an intimate one When we have an idea or thought about the world and we wish to express that idea or thought to others we utter a sentence or make a statement If the statement correctly describes the world then it is true Moreover it seems as though our ability to have more complex or sophisticated thoughts about the world increases as the complexity of our language or our ability to use the language increases Understanding the complex relationship between language thought and the world is one of the central aims of philosophy This book is an attempt to increase our understanding of this complex relationship by focusing on certain philosophical issues that arise from our ability to refer to objects in the world though the use of language In particular it is an attempt to solve the puzzles of reference and belief that Frege and Russell presented within the context of a theory of direct reference for proper names
