to Economic Resources in Eastern Africa Gita Gopal, 1999 The impetus for change in African legal reform is coming primarily from African women themselves as they respond to their personal and practical experiences with the law Top down imposition of norms has not worked if legal reform is to lead to sustainable equity for women the voices of these women must be heard Given that previous efforts to ensure greater equity in personal laws have not been fully successful in eastern African countries any new legal initiatives must not repeat the mistakes of the past Law must not again remain merely on the books as a legitimizing tool that reinforces or supports gender discrimination but must actively protect and guard the interests of both men and women This paper attempts to draw out some possible lessons from past experience to inform new efforts at legal reform in these countries It examines the laws related to allocation of economic resources within households in the broader historical social and cultural context in some of these countries and examines the effectiveness of these laws in challenging gender relationships

Russian Enterprise Reform Harry G. Broadman, 1998-01-01 To enhance and sustain economic prosperity Russian authorities must improve the business climate so that firms restructure and the private sector thrives within a market environment Meeting this challenge requires actions on several fronts The Russian government asked the World Bank to write policy papers to address this issue This volume contains those policy papers which were then presented at a high level workshop in Moscow The topics include removing impediments to robust interfirm competition such as structural concentration arbitrary regulatory practices and entry barriers strengthening corporate governance incentive systems enhancing the nascent institutional framework for the exercise of creditor rights and implementation of enterprise bankruptcy procedures reducing barter and other nonmonetary forms of business transactions and fostering enterprise restructuring The volume also contains formal comments on these papers presented by senior Russian officials at the workshop implementation of specific policies contributing to sound telecommunications decisions This dissertation presents an analytical comparison of privatization of the Chilean and Mexican telecommunications industries beginning with an overview of the telecommunications industry in developing nations A discussion of the lessons learned from privatization of telecommunications in other developing nations as well as progress to date will follow A review of the background of telecommunications privatization and lessons from more developed nations completes the historical background necessary to frame the remaining topics An examination of recent developments shows how the pressure for reform is mounting notably because of technological advancements and the increasingly competitive telecommunications global marketplace The primary focus of the paper is on identifying policies and practices that will maximize the gains from divestiture Telefonos de Mexico and Compa a de Telecomunicaciones de Chile are examined in a comparative analysis of the privatization processes and results in Mexico and Chile An examination of research results includes a discussion of socioeconomic issues and their implications followed by a discussion of policy issues and their implications The paper ends with a discussion of research limitations and suggestions for further research
