Tilzer,Colette Serruya,2012-12-06 The vast majority of the world s lakes are small in size and short lived in geological terms Only 253 of the thousands of lakes on this planet have surface areas larger than 500 square kilometers At first sight this statistic would seem to indicate that large lakes are relatively unimportant on a global scale in fact however large lakes contain the bulk of the liquid surface freshwater of the earth Just Lake Baikal and the Laurentian Great Lakes alone contain more than 38% of the world's total liquid freshwater. Thus the large lakes of the world accentuate an important feature of the earth's freshwater reserves: its extremely irregular distribution. The energy crisis of the 1970s and 1980s made us aware of the fact that we live on a spaceship with finite, exhaustible resources. On the other hand, the energy crisis led to an overemphasis on all the issues concerning energy supply and all the problems connected with producing new energy. The energy crisis also led us to ignore strong evidence suggesting that water of appropriate quality to be used as a resource will be used up more quickly than energy will. Although in principle water is a renewable resource, the world's water reserves are diminishing in two fashions, the effects of which are multiplicative: enhanced consumption and accelerated degradation of quality.
