Migrant and Refugee Access to Health Systems Luca Follis, Karolina Follis, Nicola Burns, 2025-05-14 In light of the ongoing struggle faced by migrants and refugees trying to access healthcare this thought provoking book tackles key issues at the intersection of mobility and health It critically engages with the bureaucratic economic and cultural barriers faced by these groups arguing that a sedentary bias persists in national health systems

A Medicated Empire Timothy M. Yang, 2021-06-15 Winner of the 2022 Hagley Prize in Business History In A Medicated Empire Timothy M Yang explores the history of Japan s pharmaceutical industry in the early twentieth century through a close account of Hoshi Pharmaceuticals one of East Asia s most influential drug companies from the late 1910s through the early 1950s Focusing on Hoshi s connections to Japan s emerging nation state and empire as well as the ways in which it embraced an ideology of modern medicine as a humanitarian endeavor Yang shows how the industry promoted a hygienic middle class culture that was part of Japan s national development and imperial expansion Yang demonstrates that the company s fortunes had less to do with scientific breakthroughs and medical innovations than with Japan s web of social political and economic relations He lays bare Hoshi s business strategies and its connections with politicians and bureaucrats and he describes how public health authorities dismissed many of its products as placebos at best and poisons at worst Combining global histories of business medicine and imperialism A Medicated Empire illuminates how the development of the pharmaceutical industry simultaneously supported and subverted regimes of public health at home and abroad

Nurturing Indonesia Hans Pols, 2018-08-09 Hans Pols proposes a new perspective on the history of colonial medicine from the viewpoint of indigenous physicians The Indonesian medical profession in the Dutch East Indies actively participated in political affairs by joining and leading nationalist associations by publishing in newspapers and magazines and by becoming members of city councils and the colonial parliament Indonesian physicians were motivated by their medical training their experiences as physicians and their subordinate position within the colonial health care system to organise lead and join social cultural and political associations Opening with the founding of Indonesia s first political association in 1908 and continuing with the initiatives of the Association of Indonesian Physicians Pols describes how the Rockefeller Foundation s projects inspired the formulation of a nationalist health programme Tracing the story through the Japanese annexation the war of independence and independent Indonesia Pols reveals the relationship between medicine and decolonisation and the role of physicians in Asian history

Domestic Nationalism Chiara Formichi, 2025-10-28 Chiara Formichi argues that Muslim women in Java and Sumatra from the late 1910s to the 1950s were central to Indonesia s progress as guardians and promoters of health and piety through gendered activities of care work While sidelined in the Dutch colonial project of hygienic modernity women s labor of social reproduction became increasingly visible Women from all walks of life were called upon to fulfill domestic and motherly roles for the production and socialization of laborers soldiers and citizens The medicalization of cleanliness intersecting with multiple patriarchal orders marginalized women's traditional influence and knowledge. However, leveraging the critical importance of infant care, cleanliness, and nutrition, women pushed against the boundaries imposed on them by the colonial and postcolonial state. Largely absent from government archives, their words and acts are evident in vernacular magazines and visual sources drawn from official outreach, news, and lifestyle media, and advertisements. Women writers rearticulated scientific mothering, nationalist maternalism, and Islamic ideals of motherhood to create a public voice through gendered care work. Domestic Nationalism proposes that as the modern Indonesian nation-state took shape, capitalizing on the public function of mothering, so did homemaking become a crossroads of national and international approaches to development, blurring nonaligned self-reliance and global capitalist interests.

Renaming Plants and Nations in Japanese Colonial Korea Jung Lee, 2025-04-10. This book studies a striking example of intensely negotiated colonial scientific practice: the case of botanical practice in Korea during the Japanese colonisation from 1910 to 1945. The shared aim of botanists who encountered one another in colonial Korea to practise modern Western botany is successfully revealed through analysis of their fieldwork and subsequent publications. By exploring the variations in what that term should mean and the politically charged nature of the interactions between both imperial and colonial players, it reveals how botanists of the region created a form of scientific practice that was neither clearly Western nor particularly modern. It shows how the botany that evolved in this context was a product of colonially resourced, globally connected practice immersed in intertwined traditions rather than simply a copy of modern Western botany. Utilizing extensive primary sources, this book will be of interest to students and scholars of the history of science, colonial Korean history, and environmental history.

Disease, Colonialism, and the State Ka-che YIP, 2009-01-01. Studying malaria in modern East Asia in the context of the global history of the disease, this book fills an important gap in our understanding of the cultural, social, economic, and political dimensions of the relationship between malaria and human society in a region which has often been neglected by historians of the disease. The authors examine the development and consequences of various anti-malaria strategies in Hong Kong, Okinawa, Taiwan, mainland China, and East Asia as a whole. The British and Japanese colonial models of disease control are explored, as is the later American technological model of DDT residue spraying promoted by the Rockefeller Foundation, which played a significant role in the global anti-malaria campaign and the development of public health in Asia. In the post-World War II period, the use of DDT and international political and economic interests helped to shape anti-malaria policies of the Nationalist government in Taiwan. In mainland China, the Beijing government's mass mobilization and primary health care model of anti-malaria control has given way to new strategies as recent changes in the health care system have affected anti-malaria efforts and public health developments. This book illuminates an important and largely unexplored dimension of the history of malaria: the interplay of the state, colonial or sovereign, international interests, new medical knowledge and technology, changing concepts of health and disease, as well as local society in the formulation and implementation of anti-malaria policies. It will be of
