

The Latest Research on
DREAM TELEPATHY

What is it?
Telepathy is the ability to communicate with another person without using any of the ordinary channels of communication, such as sight, sound, touch, or smell.

Is it real?
There is a growing body of scientific evidence that suggests that telepathy is a real phenomenon. In a series of experiments, researchers have shown that people can communicate with each other using a technique called "remote viewing." This involves a person who is physically separated from another person, but who is able to "see" or "feel" the other person's presence. This has been demonstrated in a number of experiments, including one in which a person was able to identify a target location in a city that was hundreds of miles away.

How does it work?
The exact mechanism of telepathy is still unknown, but it is thought to involve some form of energy transfer between the brains of the communicating parties. Some researchers believe that this energy is in the form of electromagnetic waves, while others believe it is in the form of some other type of energy. The fact that telepathy appears to be a real phenomenon, however, suggests that there is something about the human mind that we are only beginning to understand.

Can it be used?
Telepathy has a number of potential applications. It could be used to help people who are unable to communicate in other ways, such as those who are deaf or blind. It could also be used to help people who are in danger, such as those who are trapped in a disaster zone. Finally, it could be used to help people who are trying to solve a problem, such as those who are trying to find a lost object or a missing person.

Is it dangerous?
There is no evidence to suggest that telepathy is dangerous. In fact, it is thought to be a natural part of the human mind, and it is likely that we are all capable of it to some extent. The only potential danger is that it could be used for nefarious purposes, such as spying or sabotage. However, this is a possibility that is shared by many other technologies, and it is not clear how much more dangerous telepathy would be than any of these other technologies.
