The Complete Croquet-Player James Dunbar Heath,2013-09 This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book without typos from the publisher Not indexed Not illustrated 1874 edition Excerpt ever when it is wished to draw the adversary away from playing the proper game it is admissible to give a double shot as a tice so as to tempt him to shoot where his missing would give you the dead ball Principle 9 When you are unlikely to make or continue a break with your own ball play to lay the break for your partner When one or two doubtful and risky strokes would result if successful in a long break it is worth while trying for it but when from the position of the balls it is evident that no good break would ensue even if those strokes were to succeed the best play is to lay as good a break as possible for your partner for keeping the break on your side is worth more than the chance of a point or two Your game is to leave your partner a ball to play on and another at his hoop or a rush to his hoop and a ball at his next hoop but one or lay him a break in some other equally effective way It is of great importance to know when to continue your own break and when to leave off and play your partner s game INSTRUCTIONS TO THE PLAYER WHO IS IN AND HAS THE BREAK 1 Before you make your next point in your break always provide if possible for your next point but one either by sending a ball forward to help you there or by arranging a rush to it from the point you are about to make 2 Never leave a ball behind in the break if it can be avoided except for special reasons see page 68 3 Do not let the balls you are playing on in your break get too close together or you will not have sufficient room to make the stop or splitting strokes you may require see pages 69 and 74 4 Always prefer a rush to your hoop to a long rolling stroke to it It is often worth while going some distance out of the
