About the Aluminum
Association

The Aluminum Association is an industry-wide trade organization representing over 50 companies including all the primary producers of aluminum in the United States, leading manufacturers of semi-fabricated aluminum products and principal founders and leaders.

The Association's aims are to increase public and industrial understanding of aluminum and the aluminum industry and — through its technical, statistical, marketing and informational activities — to serve industries, consumers, financial analysts, educators, students, government agencies and the public generally.

For the aluminum industry and those industries that use aluminum, the Association helps develop standards and designations systems, helps prepare codes and specifications involving aluminum products and studies technical problems of the industry.

The Association maintains and periodically issues industry-wide statistics and records which, as an authorized
