These indigenous American musical forms are the product of and a moving expression of the African American experience. Musical geniuses and innovators like Duke Ellington, Louis Armstrong, Bessie Smith, B.B. King, and Jimi Hendrix turned individual and collective histories of suffering and injustice into soul-stirring, monumental art that shattered boundaries, shifted perceptions, and contributed to progress in civil rights. Their efforts were matched by other African Americans in the entertainment field like Jackie Robinson, Josephine Baker, and Sidney Poitier. American artists who teach music dance and visual arts at colleges and universities that have traditionally been viewed as White institutions In this captivating and moving book Theresa Jenoure shows that there s a great deal to be learned from the experience of these teachers She explores their visions and callings as creative artists and how they function in higher education In so doing she presents relevant ideas about the development and sustenance of creativity As the twelve teachers stories unfold they share their hearts generously and speak their minds frankly offering kaleidoscopic glimpses into their biographies They talk about the various paths that led them to become artists and teachers honoring special people and incidents that have aided them along the way They identify some of the ways they became politicized aware or even positioned in social and political terms giving names to forces that have shaped their views on social group membership These are the stories we need to hear Their voices resonate powerfully presenting a rare opportunity to be moved and changed Much more than merely an objective look at African Americans and the arts Navigators is as alive and vibrant as the music art and dance it describes Jenoure includes profiles and riffs to serve as bridges between the chapters The profiles offer closer looks at four of the teachers and the riffs much like highly creative jazz compositions from which the word is borrowed are interjected between the chapters helping to merge fact with fiction

Anuforum,2002 Music: Black, White & Blue Ortiz Walton,1980 What Is This Thing Called Jazz? Eric Porter,2002-01-31 Despite the plethora of writing about jazz little attention has been paid to what musicians themselves wrote and said about their practice An implicit division of labor has emerged where for the most part black artists invent and play music while white writers provide the commentary Eric Porter overturns this tendency in his creative intellectual history of African American musicians He foregrounds the often ignored ideas of these artists analyzing them in the context of meanings circulating around jazz as well as in relationship to broader currents in African American thought Porter examines several crucial moments in the history of jazz the formative years of the 1920s and 1930s the emergence of bebop the political and experimental projects of the 1950s 1960s and 1970s and the debates surrounding Jazz at Lincoln Center under the direction of Wynton Marsalis Louis Armstrong Anthony Braxton Marion Brown Duke Ellington W C Handy Yusef Lateef Abbey Lincoln Charles Mingus Archie Shepp Wadada Leo Smith Mary Lou Williams and Reggie Workman also feature prominently in this book The wealth of information Porter uncovers shows how these musicians have expressed themselves in print actively shaped the institutional structures through which the music is created distributed and consumed and how they aligned themselves with other artists and activists and how they were influenced by forces of class and gender What Is This Thing Called Jazz challenges interpretive orthodoxies by showing how much black jazz musicians have struggled against both the racism of the dominant culture and the prescriptive definitions of racial authenticity propagated by the music s supporters both white and black
