Energy for transport is a key indicator of economic activity and infrastructure development. It is measured in kilowatt-hours (kWh) and is used to power various modes of transport, including road, rail, air, and water. The chart shows a steady increase in energy consumption over the period, reflecting the growing demand for transport services and the expansion of infrastructure. The slight dip around 2050 may be due to a temporary shift in energy sources or a change in transport modes.

The energy for transport sector is a critical component of the global energy system. It is responsible for a significant portion of the world's energy consumption and is a major source of greenhouse gas emissions. The chart shows a steady increase in energy consumption over the period, reflecting the growing demand for transport services and the expansion of infrastructure.
