Between Dream Houses and "God's Own Junkyard": Architecture and the Built Environment in American Suburban Fiction Stefanie Strebel, 2021-06-28 The American suburb is a space dominated by architectural mass production sprawl as well as a monotonous aesthetic eclecticism and many critics argue that it has developed from a postwar utopia into a disorienting environment with which it is difficult to identify The typical suburb has come to display characteristics of an atopia that is a space without borders or even a non place a generic space of transience Dealing with the representation of architecture and the built environment in suburban literature and film from the 1920s until present this study demonstrates that in its fictional representations too suburbia has largely turned into a place of non architecture A lack of architectural ethos and an abundance of Junkspace define suburban narratives causing an increasing sense of disorientation and entropy in fictional characters America at the Mall Lisa Scharoun, 2014-01-10 Since the construction of the first fully enclosed shopping center in 1952 the shopping mall has evolved into the heart of many suburban areas across the United States More than simply a place to purchase goods this veritable temple of consumerism has become a primary place for community and social interaction and an essential element in many citizens day to day lives This study explores the spiritual emotional and physical effects of the enclosed shopping mall on the public chronicling the growth of the mall its role in shaping urban and suburban life its positive and negative impacts on society and the environment and its future viability As this work shows the mall remains rich in symbolic influence and in many ways mirrors the American condition Expanding the American Dream Barbara M. Kelly, 1993-01-01 Much has been written about the housing policies of the Depression and the Postwar period Much less has been written of the houses built as a result of these policies or the lives of the families who lived in them Using the houses of Levittown Long Island as cultural artifacts this book examines the relationship between the government sponsored mass produced housing built after World War II the families who lived in it and the society that fostered it Beginning with the basic four room slab based Cape Cods and Ranches Levittown homeowners invested time and effort barter and money in the expansion and redesign of their houses The author shows how this gradual process has altered the socioeconomic nature of the community as well bringing Levittown fully into the mainstream of middle class America This book works on several levels For planners it offers a reassessment of the housing policies of the 1940s and 50s suggesting that important lessons remain to be learned from the Levittown experience For historians it offers new insights into the nature of the suburbanization process that followed World War II And for those who wish to understand the subtle workings of their own domestic space within their lives it offers food for speculation
