Scientific Inquiry Cycle: Review

Science helps communities solve problems by developing knowledge and creating things that "solve" real-world issues such as water quality or waste management using scientific ideas or designs. Solutions can have a positive impact on understanding the problem fully, including its causes and effects, as the first step in finding an effective resolution.

Designing solutions begins by considering various constraints, such as budget, time, and safety concerns. Constraints represent some part of a problem that limits the options available, and it is important to weigh these trade-offs carefully. For example, creating materials for a house that are affordable to build and easy to use, cannot influence the effectiveness of the solution.

After identifying a solution, determining how it works, what constraints affected it, and any compromises that have already been or should be made on the idea. Communication, using design models, and reflecting on the results of the solution are important steps. The process of testing, sharing, and evaluating locally encourages responsible decision-making and helps communities thrive.

3. Which is an example of a trade-off?
- Finding a solution with no constraints
 - Ignoring safety concerns
 - Knowing how to avoid
 - Using unsafe materials
4. Why is communication important?
- So others can learn from your work
 - To make ideas clearer
 - To finish the problem as quickly as possible
