

1. Human behavior is the potential and manifested capacity of human individuals or groups to respond to internal and external stimuli throughout their lives (mentally, physically, and socially). An individual's behavior is influenced by genetic and environmental influences.
2. Victimology is a relatively recent subfield in Biosocial Science. It focuses on the victim-criminal interaction and is used to define the study of those who have been physically abused by criminals.
3. Physical variables such as age, health, disease, pain, and the influence of a substance or medicine all have an impact on behavior and also personal and emotional factors include personality, beliefs, expectations, emotions, mental health, and life experiences such as family, culture, friends, and life events for what the individual requires and desires.

1. Criminology fascinates me because of its significance in society: without a better knowledge of criminal motivations, the judicial system on which we rely would cease to function.
2. Forensic science relies heavily on chemistry. Forensic scientists can use chemistry to construct a picture of what happened, sometimes on a molecular level.
3. Chemistry is used in criminology to explain criminal conduct. Forensic chemistry is the analytic study of compounds that are readily misinterpreted or confounded, with the goal of determining their identification.
4. You will study about the factors that might impact crime and criminal behavior. Using real local and worldwide statistics, you'll examine rising crime rates and the "who, what, when, where, and why" of criminal offenses.
