

Chapter 5

Doing History: A Guide for Students

Learning Objectives:

- To manifest interest in local history and cultural heritage.
- To apply historiographical methods in writing the history of one's locality or country.
- To incorporate technology in the discipline of history.
- To appreciate the value of doing history to the present day.

It is not enough that we know our history. We must also realize that as agents of social change, we can contribute to the narrative of the nation by participating in writing about our past and our present. This chapter focuses on applying the skills we have learned in the previous chapters in writing history. Special attention will be given to doing online research, library/archival research, biographies/life history, and local/oral history. An additional discussion on interacting with history through historical shrines and museums will also help us in appreciating the story of the past as it comes to life through our own experiences in visiting and interacting with these learning spaces.
